Deny Germans Arming

TWO SUSPECTS ARE ARRESTED

OMAHA, Jan. 16.—Dtectives Palmtag and Murphy at noon today arrested two men in connection with the mysterious death of Earl Williams, whose body was left in the corridor of the University hospital here shortly after midnight by two men who excitedly whispered: "Here's a patient" and disappeared.

The men under arrest gave the names of Harold Westbrook, alias "Swede," of White River S. D., and Claude E. Dixon.

According to Captain of Detectives Van Dueson, both Dixon and Westbrook claim the killing of Williams was accidental. Police had failed to learn the location of the shooting this afternoon.

Both men had large sums of money on their persons when arrested. Captain Van Deusen said they are members of one of the largest automobile stealing gangs in the country.

Dixon and Westbrook were arrested while driving in a stolen coupe. They admitted taking Williams' body to the hospital.

WARDEN'S WIFE IS WORKER

"MA" WHITMAN HELPS ILLINOIS CONVICTS GO STRAIGHT.

A Strict Disciplinarian, She Insists on Observance of Rules by Inmates.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Ma Whitman, wife of John I. Whitman, warden of the state penitentiary at Joliet, who has been characterized by "Yellow Kid" Weil as "the greatest influence in making convicts go straight," believes that the so-called "milk of human kindness" should be certified.

There are too many tears in most of the kindness given convicts today by sentimentalists, she avers, and insists that the men "don't like it."

"Ma" is the more appropriate name for Mrs. Whitman. Not "mother." She wouldn't want to be referred to among the men as "mother."

She is just plain "ma"—the brusque yet revered disciplinarian, that most of the men knew in childhood days as the relentless personage who insisted that they "wash the back of their necks" and "keep that dog down in the basement."

Convicts Must Doff Their Caps.

Illustrative of her rôle as a disciplinarian, Mrs. Whitman introduced that custom of compelling the convicts to remove ther caps when she or any other woman enters their presence.

Yet while ostensibly austere and detached, the prisoners know that she is constantll devoting her energy in their behalf.

"It's the little acts of kindness that count for most," she says. "Few people benefit from the big, widely advertised philanthropies."

None of her welfare work is ostentatious. Except as a quiet attendant at chapel services and at their entertainments, she is seldom seen by the prisoners, altho seh is a daily visitor at the prison farm.

But every "number" in the institution knows of her good works thru the infallible "grapevine" route.

She solicits old clothes for the "trusties." She gave her own piano to the farm colony prisoners. Sre procured suits and equipment for the baseball team. She helps plan their entertainments. She mingles with the relatives and visitors of the convicts.

In emergencies she forsakes her obscurity and becomes the militant mistress of the manse. To illustrate. Fire broke out in the old Bidwell, where Mr. Whitman was warden many years ago. The lives of 300 prisoners were endangered. "Ma" Whitman leaped to the role of marshal, shouted her commands thru the cellhouse, restored order, helped extinguish the flames—all without a single casualty.

Once she presided over the prison when her husband was ill.

The stereotyped "sob stuff" that usually overcomes her sentimental sisters in prison reform doesn't register at all with "Ma" Whitman.

Can Tell Imposition.

"She is much shrewder than I am in detecting when one is imposing upon her," testifies her husband, the warden.

Is this attitude effective? The warden's quarters are crammed to every nook and cranny with portraits, paintings, ornamental boxes, trinkets and bric-a-brac, fashioned out by men in their spare moments for the prison regent—"Ma" Whitman.

An all-pervading faith inspires her in her work. And it is this implicit trust which she reposes in the men which accounts for their admiration for her.

When "Ma" Whitman wants to pick some cherries or spade her garden, does she turn out the guard and a batch of trusties? No, she just steps into the prison house and takes a dozen unassorted murderers, burglars and safeblowers out with her.

"I don't make them promise not to run away. I just take them along. And they take care of themselves and me, too."

ALTON B. PARKER IS TO WED

Candidate for President in 1904 at Seventy to Wed Woman of Fifty-one.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Alten B. Parker, candidate for president on the democratic ticket in 1904, obtained a license today to marry Mrs. Amelia Day Campbell of New York. Judge Parker said he would be married today. He gave his age as seventy and that of the bride as fifty-one.

Deserted Wief and Children.

KEARNEY, Neb. Jan. 16.—Sheriff Sam Parr picked up two men Sunday both wanted, in different cities, for deserting their wives and children. Edgar Flossy, who quit his wife and child at Alma, was working at odd jobs near Amherst when found. W. M. Blunt wanted in Hastings on a charge of deserting his wife and child, was being employed at the state hospital. Both admitted their identity and accompanied officers back to stand trial.

BRIEF STATE NEWS.

FIGURES IN FAMOUS TEXAS MYSTERY

When Hiram Knox, reputed to be a multi-millionaire Texas rancher and lumberman, was found dead in his home in Hemphill, Tex., it was thought to have been a case of suicide. Later, however, his beautiful widow was arrested, charged with murder, which she indignantly denied. She was released on $5,000 bail by the district court in San Augustine, following habeas corpus proceedings.

NOVEL DEVICE FOR HENS

OHIO MAN COMBINES MOUSE TRAP, ALARM AND SWITCH.

Finds That Turning on of Electric Lights in Henhouse Results in More Eggs.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O.—(By Mail.)—A combination of a mouse trap, alarm clock and electric switch has been devised by Carleton Shepherd to increase egg production.

This became known when neighbors watched D. Allen Bond, state representative, make one of the contrivances. due credit for which is given by Bond to Shepherd.

The men's mutual hobby is chicken raising. They installed electric lights in their hen houses.

Then, to increase the number of "daylight" hours for their hens, they turned on the lights each morning at 5 o'clock. In the evening the lights were kept on until 8 o'clock.

Egg production jumped, Bond getting twenty-seven and one one-quarter dozen from his twenty hens last month.

Early Hours Disliked.

Even tho eg gproduction was jumping, the idea of the owners jumping out on a cold morning to turn the lighting switch and then jump back into bed to complete their snooze did not appeal to either.

Shepher ddecided that as Edison was busy making out some variety of questionnaire for college boys to anawer, there was no use in looking toward New Jersey for aid, so he got busy.

He rigged up an alarm clock, a mouse trap and a light switch on a board. Attaching a cord from the trigger of the alarm clock to the catch on the mouse slayer, he hitched another wire to the light switch.

Now he sets the alarm for 4 a. m., has the bell deadened so it won't awaken, and can snore as per usual while the clapper sets off the mouse trap, which pulls the cord on the light switch, and, bingo! The hens find it's time to get up—and begin laying.

Bond has gone a step farther. He has two light lines running to his hen house, because, being used to diplomatic procedure, he found that the hens were left in the dark, literally, when the lights are put out at bedtime for the chickens.

So he has an extra circuit. It lights a di mlight. This does in the place of twilight and permits the hens to find roosts after the electric sun has set. Otherwise, they would be unable to find the roosts and be forced to spend the nights on the floor.

INDIAN CHIEF AT NELSON MONUMENT WHILE IN LONDON TO PETITION KING GEORGE

Chief White Elk attracted much attention on his arrival in the British capital to petition the king for privileges for his people. Wearing his picturesque Indian chieftain's attire, he addressed a great crowd at Trafalgar Square, London. This photograph shows Chief White Elk at the paws of one of the huge lions on the Nelson monument.

America Must Save Europe.

The British assistance and their American bankers are now bringing pressure on the Harding administration to come to their assistance—the same kind of pressure which they brougt to bear on the United States when during the war they wanted a huge American army in France or a small one in Siberia. Civilization, Mr. Bonar Law says, is again in danger of being wrecked. The British government alone cannot avert this disaster. It needs help from the American government to restrain the French from preferring the collapse of civilization to the possible future welfare of Germany.

If a second American intervention succeeds any better than the first, it must begin by rescuing Germany and Europe from the fruits of a victory which was accomplished at a cost of at least $20,000,000,000 and 50,000 American lives. The American people will not have to pay as much to get rid of the treaty of Versailles as they did to render it possible but unless they undertake to get rid of it, there will not in a few years be much civilization left in Europe. If they can only succeed in unwriting the treaty, they will obtain full value for the additional ten or fifteen billions that it will cost.

Accordingly what we hope that President Harding will do is to offer an American loan, and all that he dares to offer by way of remission of the principal and interest of the war debts, provided France will abandon the military sanctions under the treaty, evacuate the Rhineland, reduce the indemnity not merely to $10,000,000,000 but to $10,000,000,000 less the amount which is remitted by the British and American governments from the debts owed by France to them, grant a moratorium to Germany for say five years, guarantee Germany against invasion for any future failure to pay, and restore Germany to a place in the counsels and the social economy of Europe commensurate with the number and intelligence of her inhabitants. Unless the plan of the administration to go to the assistance of Europe attaches prime importance to this consideration, it will be far better for President Harding not to intervene in Europe; and if Europe should refuse to accept assistance on the proposed terms the American government should remain detached. There is no hope for Europe until the French and British will admit the incompatibility between the reign of violence perpetrated by the treaty of Versailles and the restoration of international prosperity and order.—The New Republic.

Pawnee City—The Humboldt News, which has been edited in Humboldt for about three years by Simeon Beardsley, has been leased to James Yowell of Verdon and will hereafter be edited by him. The old editor will retire, and may continue his old calling of writing.

Better health conditions exist among American negroes now than did ten years ago, life insurance records show.

HOODED MEN IN WARNING

COURTHOUSE, Bastrop, La., Jan. 16.—Dr. B. M. McKoin and W. P. Kirkpatrick were members of a hooded mob that terrorized the Little Fellowship church last May, G. W. Walker testified at the open hearing today.

The robed and masked men entered the church with drawn revolvers and warned the worshipers against "any more trouble because we warn just once," Walker testified.

STATE OF SIEGE IS DECLARED AT MEMEL

Lithuanians Throw German Mayor Into Prison—Three Lithuanians and Two French Soldiers Killed.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—Lithuanians who captured Memel, league of nations capital of the international zone in East Prussia, declared a state of siege today and threw the German mayor into prison.

Three Lithuanians and two French soldiers were killed in the "fighting" for possession of the city, in which a handful of French troops quickly gave way and surrendered to the invaders, who crossed the border to drive out Germans from Memel.

Today was quiet. The French troops hoisted a whit flag and withdrew to their barracks, turning the city over to the Lithuanians.

WOMAN WOULD OUTLAW WAR

Resolution Introduced by Winifred Mason Huck Would Refer War to Peoples.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Outlawing of war thru an international agreement that no nation would declare war on another except by national referendum, was proposed in a resultion introduced today by Representative Winifred Mason Huck of Illinois.

The resolution instructs the president to start the movement by informing all nations that the United States will give its people sole power to declare war against any power that delegates the same authority to its people.

Mrs. Huck was given an unusual ovation when she finished a brief speech on her resolution which she called "woman's proposal for ending all war and securing lasting peace."

NEED COLLEGE FOR DUMBBELLS

Dr. Walter Dill Scott Believes Backward Need Institution.

EVANSTON, Ill., Jan. 16.—Universities for students of law grade intelligence are needed in the present system of education, President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university, believes.

Dr. Scott, having adapted the curricula of Northwestern to accommodate the college genius and give him a fair chance, is now concerned with the class room "dumbell."

"We must devise some scheme which will separate bad students from good," the noted educator said. "Each should be allowed to develop untrammeled by the other. We make special eqorts for the excellent student—why not for the defectives also?

"The trouble is that no existing college would consent to receive very deficient students exclusively. Still, such a scheme is by no means impossible. In the public schools the class F children receive better treatment and more expert instruction than those in class A."

New colleges to be established expressly for backward students would save the problem, President Scott declared.

NO REPORT OF GERMAN MOVE

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The French war department tonight issued absolute denial of a report circulated by a press association that 25,000 German reichswehr were concentrating at Muenster.

PARIS, Jan. 16—The French foreign office this evening stated it had no knowledge of a report that German reichswehr were concentrated at Muenster, near which the French army occupying the Ruhr has advanced.

The war department is investigating the report.

DUSSELDORF, Jan. 16.—General DeGoutte, commanding the French forces of occupation in the Rhineladn Ruhr, sent an ultimatum to German coal operators tonight ordering them to resume deliveries Thursday or further reprisals will be taken.

Operators of the Ruhr suspended work at their mines and declined to make deliveries to the French acting under orders from German Coal Commissioner Stutz.

UNWED MOTHER IS RELEASED

CHICAGO, Jan. 16—Charges against Miss Katheieen Morrell, unwed mother of five children of John S. Curtin, were dismissed by Judge J. B. Morgan in morals court here today. Miss Morrell was accused of contributing the deliquency of her children thru her relations with Curtin.

Attorneys for Mrs. Martha Curtin. who brought the charges, informed the court that Miss Morrell was ill and they had no desire to push the prosecution.

The court then took up the charges of ocntributing to the deliquency of the Morrell children against Curtin.

"Are you the father of Miss Morrell's children?" Judge Morgan asked Curtin.

"I am," the former wealthy coal dealer replied. "I will take care of them and see that they have sufficient money, fo rtheir support."

The court instructed Miss Morrell that her children had the right to know who their father was and that she sould inform them of the circumstances of their birth.

Golf Caretaker Kept Busy.

KEARNEY, Neb., Jan. 16—Only one man in Kearney is finding fault with the winter weather which has been Nebraska's lot to date and he is engaged neoither as a coal man nor a plumber. He is Col. G. F. Stubitz, caretaker of the Kearney Country club grounds. For, in Kearney, the golf season was one continous grind thru 1922 and it is getting away to a flying start for the new year, golfers beig out in force almost daily. Playing has been interrupted during the winter for not more than a couple of days, the greens are kept in good shape and many golfers are taking advantage of it.

HONEYMOON COUPLE AND GIANT LION BRIDE'S RIFLE BROUGHT DOWN IN AFRICA

Augustine Healy of Chicago and his bride left aVncouver early in 1920 on their honeymoon. They proceeded by short stages thru the orient and then into Africa. The Healys spent three months in the jungles. They are shown above with a lion brought down by Mrs. Healy, a 100-pound modern Diana. The lion is said to be the third largest prize ever taken in Africa by big game hunters.

They also protested to congress against the passage of the Bursam bill, which, they declared, would deprive them of their fast dwindling lands. Chief Bacon Rind is seen at the extreme left.

AMERICAN TROOPS RECALLED FROM RHINE

As a kind of protest against French invasion of the Ruhr district, President Harding has ordered Major General Henry T. Allen, commanding the American troops at Coblenz bridgehead, on the Rhine, to return with his men to America. These troops are taking their last look at Ehrenbreistein, on a huge rock near Coblenz, once Germany's greatest fortress, which they have been occupying.

OCCUPATION IS EXTENDED

French Pushing Forward Over Fan-Shaped Area.

THIRD BIG TOWN INVADED

Uprisings Feared in Westphalia Region.

French General Orders Soldiers to Shoot If Attack With Stones at Buer Is Repeated.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—French infantry marched thru the streets of Dortmund, third big Ruhr town to be occupied in the invasion, just before noon today.

Fears of trouble were allayed as citizens of the industrial center stood quietly on the sidewalks watching the troops, who were led by fifteen officers.

The mayor issued a proclamation calling for quiet and dignity.

French troops in the Ruhr pushed further forward over a fan-shaped area today, and it is believed the invaders will extend their occupation beyond the River Lippe, as far as Hamm.

The outer arc of the occupied area reached this forenoon passed thru Recklinhausen, Hern, Castrop and Bochum. Complete occupation of Dortmund was expected to be announced at any moment.

Ordered to Shoot.

Germans at Buer stoned French troops as the latter marched into the town.

The French general in command ordered his soldiers to shoot if the attack was repeated. The police chief was ordered punished for the outbreak.

Uprisings thruout Westphalia and the Ruhr were feared momentarily as the temper of both invaders and civilians became uglier with an increasing number of incidents such as the Agitatoin was under way in Bavaria today to create a new "anwohnerwehr" (citizen guards) hitherto forbidden by the allies.

It is indicated that the occupation will include virtually all of Rhenish Westphalia's mining region, representing about three-fourths of the whole German output. This will take French troops into the heart of the Westphalia region.

The first bloodshed of the occupation—at Bochum, where French troops shot down German civilians yesterday, killing one and wounding others, is feared in Berlin to be but preliminary to further casualties thruout the occupied zone.

Reports Conflicting.

Reports of the shooting at Bochum yesterday are conflicting. Some reports say there was a clash in the streets between German communists and reactionaries, not directed against the French, who either mistook the character of the demonstration or considered they had to take over the duty of restoring order when local police proved powerless.

Just as this first sign of rising tide of temper among the invaders is believed to presage serious trouble for civilian populations of the Ruhr, so are the bitter feelings of the German citizens cropping out. These were indicated when Germans at Steele tore down a French military flag and shredded it to ribbons. The mayor of the town was forced to answer for the insult.

It is freely predicted that inside of a month the bloodiest guerilla warfare will devastate the Ruhr valley. Especially will this be inevitable, Germans say, if the French invaders endeavors to force the miners to "slave labor."

The German government is apparently adamant on the subject of withholding coal deliveries from France. It was permitted to be known today that the Cuno administration will not negotiate with the French on this point, as long as the Ruhr is occupied.

As the French have made it clear occupation of the Ruhr is to enforce satisfactory negotiations for coal deliveries the situation seems completely deadlocked.

The question of coal deliveries and requisitions was expected to reach a final showdown this afternoon at a meeting called by General DeGoutte at Dusseldorf. Operators and mine workers were to attend. It was understood the French general, commanding the Ruhr army of occupation wished to explain Premier Poincare's requisition orders to the Germans at first hand.

Cuno and Stutz Confer.

Chancellor Cuno held a long conference with Herr Stutz, German coal commissioner, but no communique was issued. Later Stutz expressed confidence that the operators of the Ruhr would obey his orders, and make no coal deliveries to France or Belgium. Lacking official information as to Poincare's orders and plans, Stutz is puzzled as to whether the French intend to seize the Ruhr mines and endeavor to operate them with guards at the pitheads, or to seize money destined for the workers. In either case, he predicts quick stagnation should the French alter normal transport.

"It is conceivable that the coal will pile up at the pit heads, choke production and cause eventual shutdown of the mines," Herr Stutz said. "This would lead to most serious consequences, he added.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Official announcement of the occupation of Dortmund by French troops was made today. The French line was further advanced to Horde. First military requisitions of coal were made this morning.

General Magnot reported to the cabinet official details of trouble at Bochum at 7 p. m. yesterday.

"In rioting between German citizens and communists," Maginot reported, "one person was killed. Later a crowd of two thousand attacked French troops. The latter were forced to fire One German was killed and two wounded by the volley. No soldiers were hurt. Drastic measures to prevent further rioting are in force."

NEW POSTMASTER-GENERAL MAY BE HARRY S. NEW

In the probable event that Dr. Hubert Work, postmaster general, succeeds Alfred B. Fall as secretary of the interior it is reported President Harding will appoint Senator Harry S. New of Indiana, one of the "lame ducks" of the senate, to the postoffice post.

NOT BINDING IN NEBRASKA

SUPREME COURT DISCUSSES SEARCH AND SEIZURE LAW.

Says That Federal Constitution and Decisions Under It Apply Only to Government and Its Agencies.

In an opinion written by Justice Day, the state supreme court said Tuesday that the fourth amendment to the constitution of the United States relating to search and seizures only applies to the federal government and its agencies, and decisions of the federal supreme court thereon are not controling or necessarily binding on the Nebraska supreme court in construing the Nebraska constitution, in spite of the fact that the search and seizure clauses are identical in language.

As a result Charles Billings, Antelope county bootlegger, must pay the fine of $500 and serve the sentence of thirty days imposed upon him in district court. The sheriff had gone out to Billings' house with a search warrant permitting him to search the residence and buildings, described as on a certain quarter section of land.

While the sheriff was there his attention was attracted by some suspicious circumstances, which he followed up, and out in the field some distance from the buildings he found a set up still covered with hay and elsewhere some rye mash.

Billings' attorney moved to suppress the evidence thus secured because the articles seized and the information obtained were beyond the scope of the search warrant both as to the articles seized and the place to be searched. He claimed on appeal that it was error to allow these articles to be introduced in evidence and to permit the officers to testify as to where htey found them.

Judge Day says the fallacy of this defense is in assuming that his constitutional rights were violated when the articles were used in evidence against him, when the invasion and taking of them constituted the offense. The law regards them as competent evidence notwithstanding any unlawful search and seizure, if such there was. He adds:

"The constitution and the laws of the land are not solicitous to aid persons charged with crime in their efforts to conceal or sequester evidence of their iniquity. From the necessities of the case the law countenances many devious methods of procuring evidence in criminal cases. The whole system of espionage rests, largely upon deceiving and trapping the wrongdoer into some involuntary disclosure of his crime. It dissimulates a way into his confidence; it listens at the keyhole and peers thru the transomlight. It is not nice, but it is necessary in ferreting out the crimes against society which are always done in darkness and concealment. Thus it is that almost from time immemorial courts engaged in the trial of a criminal prosecution have accepted competent and relevant evidence without question, and have refused to collaterally investigate the source or manner of its procurement, leaving the parties aggrieved to whatever direct remedies the law provides to punish the trespasser, or recover the possession of goods wrongfully taken."

M'LAUGHLIN RE-ELECTED

DONIPHAN MAN HEADS FAIR MANAGERS ANOTHER YEAR.

E. J. Mitchell, of Deshler, and William H. Smith, of Lincoln, Are Again Selected as Officials.

H. J. McLaughlin, of Doniphan, was re-elected Tuesday morning to head the Nebraska Association of Fair managers for another year. E. J. Mitchell, of Deshler, and William H. Smith, of Lincoln, were also re-elected to again hold offices as vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively. The meeting at which the election was held, the last business session of the fair managers for the year, took place in the Lindell hotel.

"Boys and girls club work" was the subject of an address given by Boyd Rist of Beatrice. Mr. Rist showed the benefits of girls and boys clubs to the children themselves, and spoke on the relation of the activities in connection with county fairs. Many of the most interesting exhibits of poultry, livestock, sewing, etc., are offered by these clubs.

"What it takes to make a good county fair secretary" was spoken on by Albert Caughey, of Deshler. Mr. Caughey explained what an important person the county fair secretary is in the matter of assisting to care for the fair's business, keep up the records of activities and expenses. He showed the qualifications necessary in the secretary of every fair board that puts on a successful fair.

Following each address a trouble man conducted a discussion and answered questions as to difficulties met by fair boards.

YALE MAN TO VISIT CITY

Professor of Biblical Literature to Confer With Student Pastors on School of Religion.

Dr. Charles F. Kent, professor of Biblical literature at Yale and director of the council of schools of religion will be in Lincoln Friday. Chancellor Avery has arranged to meet the University of Nebraska student pastors Wednesday morning to arrange for Dr. Kent's entertainment during his stay.

In a letter to Chancellor Avery written at Detroit, Mich., January 13, Dr. Kent says:

"I find that just before we launch our million dollar campaign for the Michigan school of religion, I can get away for a flying visit at four of the universities to which I have promised to go this winter. The chief objective is to determine in a prelimnary way what unversity is the most favorable center for the next Friday (coming from Iowa City) and to leave Saturday night."

RADIO FANS TO ORGANIZE

Owners of Receiving Stations Asked to Meet Next Tuesday at Y. W. C. A.

Lincoln radio fans, of whom there are something like 1,500, are issuing a general invitation to a mass meeting next Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. red room, at which they hope to effect an organization. Everyone who has a receiving station is invited to be present, and the high school club and local broadcasting stations are fostering the movement.

Plans are to be worked out whereby owners of receiving sets may know when to expect local station broadcasting, when the boys will be practicing the code, and a variety of such information designed to eliminate as much confusion as possible. A. C. Moles of the university station will tell of associations in other cities.

IN THE MAIL SINCE 1911

Ad From Lincoln a Long Time Getting to Iowa.

The other day F. A. Bonebright, 222 Ohio street, received thru the mails, a bit of advertising matter from the Korsmeyer company, 138 South Tenth street, of Lincoln, Neb. It offered reduced prices on high grade dry batteries if an order was mailed to the firm before June 1, 1911. The folder had been mailed sometime around January 1, 1911.

At that time, Frank Bonebright was operating a garage on the corner of First and Des Moines streets, which garage he sold to Hanson & Tyler who erected the present brick building in 1918. There were only a few cars in the city at that time and most of them were Words. J. W. Allington, F. A. Sacket, Dr. R. S. Dysart and E. H. Martin were among these automobile owners. A picture of the automobile then in use and for which dry batteries supplied the ignition, is upon the folder and will be remembered as the kind which had no doors. The dry batteries were then offered in barrel lots at 16 cents apiece. These are now worth 50 cents apiece. The mystery is, where has the folder lain for the past twelve years? It is badly sunburned and flyspecked.

MIDDLETON, N. Y., Jan. 16.—When ringing the church bell did not bring out residents to the fire in his garage, the owner fired his revolver. That brought a rush of villagers and the fire chemical company

ENTITLED TO DAY IN COURT

COMMISSION MOTION TO DISMISS BELL CASE DENIED.

Judge Munger Names B. H. Dunham as Master to Report the Facts and His Conclusions of Law in Phone Case.

The last thing Judge Munger did before starting around the world Tuesday was to enter an order overruling the motion of the state railway commission to dismiss the petition of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company enjoining the rate schedule prescribed by that body. The court thereupon named B. H. Dunham of Omaha to sit as master in the case.

Mr. Dunham will hold a series of hearings between now and the 1st of August, which is the time limit set by the court for taking evidence, and he is instructed to report the facts and his conclusions of law to the court.

The commission motion to dismiss was founded on the contention that the proper course for the Bell, if dissatisfied with an order of the commission, is to appeal to the state supreme court. The denial of the motion is understood to be based on the theory that the Bell had the right to choose its own forum.

The commission filed Tuesday an answer categorically denying the several claims of the Bell as set up in its petition. It says that under careful and economical management, the schedule of rates fixed would return 7 per cent on the actual investment, and that this is ample.

The commission says that the revenues of the company would be greatly increased if the American Telephone & Telegraph company, which owns practically all the stock and controls its policies, did not divert toll business for which the Northwestern is equipped to handle to the lines of the parent company.

The commission says that the affairs of the company are not economically and carefully managed; that it pays 4 1-2 per cent of its gross revenues to the parent company for instruments and service that are worth much less than that; that its expenses are extravagant and excessive in that it pays higher salaries and more to labor than is necessary to careful and efficient service, and that it employs more persons than is necessary.

Explicit denial is made that the rates ordered are confiscatory and it is asserted that the actual property values are several millions less than claimed.

LOWER MUST PAY PENALTY

CONVICTION OF AN EMBEZZLER AFFIRMED BY COURT.

Cold Comfort for Other Bankers Who Have Relied on Claim of Legislative Pardon Because of Blunder.

The conviction of Ray A. Lower, former cashier of the Valparaiso State bank, on charges of embezzling $17,360, was affirmed by the supreme court Tuesday morning. Lower escaped once before on appeal because the officer who signed the complaint had no legal right to do so. This time, however, he must begin serving his sentence, which runs from six years to forty-two years. This arises from the fact that the court sentenced him to serve from one to seven years in each of six counts, to run consecutively not concurrently.

Cold comfort is found in the decision, which was written by Judge Dean, for those bankers who have been relying upon the claim of their attorneys that because the legislature failed, when it last amended the embezzlement law, to attach a saving clause, which would have the effect of continuing the old law in force as against those who had violated it, they were granted a legislative pardon. This was one of the defenses recently submitted in the appeal of Banker Matthews of Omaha, who pleaded guilty.

The court says that it will not be presumed that the legislature, in the repeal of a criminal statute, intended thereby, either directly or indirectly, to cause the dismissal of prosecutions pending and undetermined against persons charged with the commission of criminal offenses. Neither will it be presumed that the legislature intended to bestow a legislative pardon, by the repeal of a criminal statute, upon persons guilty of a felony, but perhaps by some mishap or error in the proceedings, have not yet been lawfully sentenced.

Judge Dean says that the courts will take judicial notice of the worth of United States money, and that when a defendant is charging with embezzling a specific sum of money it is not necessary for the jury to fix in the verdict the value of the money embezzled. He also held that the appointment of two assistant attorneys general at the request of the county attorney, to prosecute the case, was proper.

Judge Dean discusses at some length the claim that Lower was entitled to his freedom by reason of the omission of a saving clause. He says that section 3097 of the code, which says that "whenever a statute shall be repealed, such repeal shall in no manner affect pending actions founded therein, x x x except as may be provided in such repealing statute," x x x is conclusive. The federal court has held that the word "actions" may include both civil and criminal.

The defense was highly technical, but the court brushes these aside by the declaration that none of these disclose that Lower had been denied any of his substantial rights.

McWaters is a veteran of the civil war, having fought in the confederate uniform.

OMAHAIS NOT PLAYING FAIR

TEACHERS' CONVENTION CONTRARY TO PROPOSED PLAN.

School Men Say Section Conferences Were to Be Reserved for the Meetings of Separate District.

Omaha and the executives of the reorganized state teachers' association are observing neither the spirit nor the letter of the reoganization plan in arranging for the delegated convention to be held in that city January 18, 19 and 20. At least that is the way in which the matter was regarded by the school executives who met in Lincoln recently with the association of school boards and school executives.

When the reorganization was pushed thru, it was with the understanding that section conferences and other sessions of instructive nature for teachers of the state would be confined to the district meetings and topics of general policy would come before the delegated body. The Omaha program was shown for the first time the end of last week when a few advance copies of the Nebraska Educational Journal, devoted to the convention plans, were distributed at the state meeting of school executives. The program shows a long list of expensive speakers and also a large number of section programs. A curious feature is that not all the sections are included. Among the subjects omitted are mathematics, history and modern languages, and the heads of these departments, and probably those of others, are not included in the list of section officers "elected Nov. 1921" which precede the program. Some of the section leaders were not informed that such programs were to be included.

Schools over the state were very generally dismissed for the 1922 meetings of the six districts. Omaha, however, is said to have made only the scantiest preparation for the meeting of the Second district and large numbers of those registered there came to Lincoln for the meeting of the First district in progress at the same date. Omaha and Council Bluffs school are now to be dismissed for the state meeting, tho that was not the original intention. Lincoln schools can not be dismissed at this time tho an effort will be made to let those on programs or elected as delegates go. The name of Superintendent M. C. Lefler of Lincoln appears as a member of the executive committee in the printed list, but Mr. Lefler has not met with the officers and knew nothing of the plans, as he was appointed recently to fill the vacancy left by L. R. Gregory's removal from the state. The schools at Columbus are to be dismissed so that teachers may attend the sessions.

Only the official delegates from each district will be able to vote. The First district has 26 delegates: the Second, 28; the Third, 16; Fourth, 14; Fifth, 8; and Sixth, 7.

Those to represent Lincoln are Dean W. E. Sealock, W. W. Curfman, Mrs. Emma Babbitt, and Mrs. Beatrice Craig. Miss Olivia Pound is a delegate but will be unable to attend. The other to represent the First district are as follows:

Maude Berry, county superintendent; F.M. Gregg; O. H. Bimson, B. C. Hendricks, J. F. Duncan, E. E. Stone, Mathilda Steckelberg, Bertha Foster, Cecilia Hoehne, Zoa Worden, R. H. Graham, C. A. Spacht, J. A. Doremus, Elna McCoy, J. R. McCommons, D. R. Leach, Mattie Chesney, F. C. Thomann, Bess Anderson, E. M. Koch, H. J. Freeborne and W. G. Brooks.

STRIKING SHOPMAN IS VICTIM OF MOB

Crowd of 1,000 Residents of Harrison, Ark., Hangs Man To Trestle.

TRIES TO DRIVE STRIKERS OUT

Campaign of Sabotage Against Road Causes Uprising.

NO ARRESTS ARE MADE YET

Hotel Man Who Went Bonds for Striking Shop Workers Is Taken From Home in Night Clothes and Whipped.

HARRISON, Ark., Jan. 16.—A mob of one thousand angry residents of Harrison hung E. S. McGregor, a striking railroad shop worker today from a high trestle near here. The mob sought to drive striking shop workers from the city following a campaign of sabotage against the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad.

The posses visited McGregor's home and demanded that he surrender. His reply was a revolver shot which wounded one member of the mob.

McGregor escaped from his home in a hail of bullets but was overtaken near the city limits. The mob left his body hanging from the trestle and it was not cut down for several hours.

Authorities had made no arrests during the morning altho the mob continued to mill thru the streets rounding up strikers for questioning in connection with recent burnings of bridges on the road.

Pete Zenable, leader of the strikers, was also reported hung but his body has not been located.

Zenable's wife was ordered to leave the community. She complied, believing her husband dead.

Mayor J. L. Clute resigned on demand of the citizens and William Parr, city marshal, ordered to leave the community, disappeared.

HARRISON, Ark., Jan. 16.—Harrison was quiet early today following a night during which striking railroad workers were threatened with violence by enraged citizens.

The trouble arose over sabotage on the Missouri & Northern Arkansas railroad which paralyzed transportation. Armed men from the surrounding country poured into Harrison late yesterday and authorities for a time feared extreme violence.

The threat of disorder, however, had not entirely passed early today.

George W. O'Neal, hotel man who went bonds for striking shop workers charged with paralyzing transportation by burning bridges, was taken from his home in his night clothes shortly afterward and whipped by the mob of citizens.

The streets were filled with milling crowds of prominent men of the vicinity who trekked into Harrison all yesterday and last night, intent on settling difficulties which threatened to result in suspension of the railroad.

Gregor, after resisting posses which were rounding up strikers for questioning regarding sabotage on the railroad, escaped thru the rear door of his home. He fled in a shower of bullets fired by the civilians and was pursued by a detachment of the mob.

Twenty other strikers taken in the roundup were held in a hall by the mob and subjected to vigorous questioning. Another group of citizens meanwhile stormed labor headquarters, burned papers and smashed furniture.

A search of Gregor's home was said to have led to the discovery of emery dust, believed to have been used in crippling locomotives on the railroad. Quantities of high explosives also were found, posses reported.

Similar discoveries were reported made at the home of J. D. Stevens, former railroader.

Governor McRay early today was besieged with requests to send state guardsmen to Harrison to quell the disturbances.

The civilians became enraged when bridges along the railroad were burned presumably by shop workers who have been on strike since the national walkout last July. Officials of the road announced service would be discontinued unless sabotage ended and the citizens took the situation in their own hands.

Eight large bridges of the road have been burned during the week, J. C. Murray, general manager of the Missouri and North Arkansas R. R., said. Thirty arrests have been made in connection with the acts of sabotage in five counties touched by the line.

Murray said trains were running on regular schedules today and service would be maintained at all hazards.

A. J. Russell, United States district attorney of Fort Smith, arrived here today to make an investigation of conditions on the railroad in compliance with instructions from Attorney General Daugherty.

ROBINSON RESIGNS FROM G. O. P. STATE CCMMITTEE.

Chairman Perry Believes Wide Acquaintance of New Officers Over State Makes Him Ideal Man for Place.

E. B. Perry, chairman of the republican state committee, announces that Elmer F. Robinson of Hartington, Nebraska, has resigned as secretary of the state committee and Dr. T. W. Bass of Broken Bow has been appointed to succeed Mr. Robinson. Dr. Bass is now serving his second term as first assistant to the chief clerk of the house of representatives. For the past four years Dr. Bass has been a member of the state executive committee from the sixth congressional district. Dr. Bass is well known thruout the state, being a prominent Odd Fellow and having been at the head of the Grand lodge of that order. With Mr. Bass acting as secretary, it is planned to keep the headquarters open until the next campaign and maintain the organization in such a manner that the new committee can function in 1924 just as soon as it is selected. Judge Perry expressed the opinion that the wide acquaintance of Dr. Bass and his popularity among republicans over the state makes him an ideal man for the place.

At the last meeting of the executive committee, Earl M. Cline of Nebraska City, a member of the executive committee from the first district, tendered his resignation as a member of the committee by reason of the fact that he has removed to Lincoln. Wilber Anness of Dunbar was selected as a member of the state committee to succeed Mr. Cline, and has also been appointed a member of the executive committeefrom the first district.

CAPPER BOOM IS PUNCTURED

SENATOR DECLARES HE WOULD NOT BE PRESIDENT.

Would Like to See Farmer From Midwest in Executive's Chair—To Work for Future of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The boom to make Senator Capper of Kansas, farmer and progressive, a presidential candidate in 1924, was punctured today by Capper himself.

"I'd like to see a farmer from the middlewest president of the United States," he stated in an interview: "I think it would be a good thing for the country—but not for me. I've got a man-sized job here in the senate for the next few years. I am going to devote my political life to working out a permanent solution of the farmer's ills.

"There is something fundamentally wrong with this agriculture system in the United States. Here a farmer gets only about thirty-four cents out of every dollar the consumer spends for farm products. In some nations they get as high as 75 cents out of the consumer's dollar.

"There is too much money being wasted between the producer and the consumer. I'm going to find out where that money goes and then I'll attempt to sweep out that waste by congressional legislation.

"If I can do that I figure I will have satisfied my ambitions.

"That looks bigger to me than being president."

Capper has been repeatedly mentioned as the farm bloc's candidate for the presidency. His recent purchase of a string of farm papers in the east was regarded by some watchful politicians as a move to provide a strong weapon for his reported presidential candidacy.

It is known that Capper has written some of his closest friends telling them he does not intend to allow the presidential bee "to buzz around him."

Capper said there was no farm bloc presidential nominee as yet. He declared he was authorizing those who had begun to boom his name to turn their work to other channels.

Senators LaFollette, Borah and Johnson and others will receive the backing of most of the progressive farm bloc members, he said. But he added that no serious consideration had been given by the groups to a unanimous choice for the presidential nomination.

DIVORCE EASY IN YUCATAN

Foreigner May Acquire a Resident for Separation Purposes in One Day.

MEXICO CITY, Mex.—(By Mail.)—Yucatan, the "land of topsy turvy," is the home of the "picture divorce."

The opposite of the "picture brides" is found in this socialist state of Mexico.

Divorces are given for the asking by any party, with or without cause. Children and maintenance for wives and property rights are respected.

The original law provides for six months' residence for foreigners before a divorce could be granted, but this was believed by the socialist officials to be a queer provision in a socialist state, which is supposed to be international. So the law was changed and now a foreigner may acquire a residence for divorce purposes in one day.

In certain cases divorces can be obtained by power of attorney given to another person and pictures of the parties in question submitted.

Since sailing to Yucatan is cheap from the United States and a visit to that state gives an opportunity to see the famous ruins of Uxmal and Chichen-Itza, it is expected that when the law becomes generally known Reno and other divorce colonies will suffer heavily.

However, with all the liberalities of the divorce laws not twelve divorces were granted during the past year.

Those going to Yucatan are advised to take along a red card.

WILL RESTORE MONARCHY

Seeress Declares War in 1926-27 to Be Won by Teutons—U. S. to Crush Japs.

BERLIN.—(By Mail.)—Germany will be ruled again by a Hohenzollern emperor—William III., the crown prince's son, in 1927.

This and other secrets of the future were revealed by a medium called "Miss S" in a meeting of Munich's "facisti." This shows how Adolph Hittler, the "facisti" leader and his friends are playing all the strings of the propaganda music instrument to rearouse the nationalists' feelings and win followers.

The rest of it is:

Germany will win the nevt great European war in 1926-27, regaining vast territories from France, which will be almost utterly destroyed. The war will bring the restoration of the German monarchy.

The president of the United States, Harding, will be reelected.

The United States will have a war with Japan in 1926 and Japan will be crushed. A great naval battle will take place near the Hawaiian islands and the Japanese fleet will be sunk.

Mexico will see the return of nobility.

Beings, but not human beings, gifted with the highest intellect and scientific knowledge, who live under water, will be discovered near a town beginning with the letter "N" in South America.

The cap came to light during a recent overhauling of the establishment and thereupon was delivered to Mr. Diestel with due ceremony.

GIVES LIFE FOR SCIENCE

FRENCH SAVANT IS A MARTYR TO THE X-RAY.

Recovering From Thirteenth Operation Which Deprived Him of Thumb of Right Hand.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—M. Charles Vaillant will live forever as a martyr of x-ray, the science which he has done more than any one man to develop. Thirteen times under the surgeon's knife tell a story of sacrifice and unselfish devotion to duty rarely equaled in the history of medicine.

Inch by inch his left arm and shoulder blade have been amputated in a vain effort to stem the progress of that deadly subtle poison which sooner or later attacks the tissues of those who work with x-ray. After each operation, fully realizing the danger, he has continued to work with the courage of a man who believes that the good of humanity is worth more than his own life.

Few visitors are allowed to enter the white-walled room which looks out over the garden of the Lariboisiere hospital. It is there he is recovering from his thirteenth operation which deprived him of the thumb of his right hand. Soon another will be necessary, then another until his life is forfeit.

Most Cheerful of Group.

To see and talk with M. Vaillant is a privilege never to be forgotten. Of all those seated or standing in a half-circle near his couch he was the most cheerful. He appeared ill-at-ease in the presence of one who had come for the purpose of interviewing him. His only [illegible]rence to his remarkable sacrifice and that still greater sacrifice to come, was an apology because he was not able to take his interviewer by the hand.

What could he say? A man with a record like that of M. Vaillant does not talk about it. He discussed the kindness of his friends in the hospital, the weather and the misfortunes of a father of nine children in whom he was interested, but had nothing to say of his own work. His eyes seemed to be focused on some object far in the distance.

He realizes that he may never go back to his laboratory again, but even that fact fails to disturb his wonderful stoicism. His experiments have been carried out over a period of twenty years and his achievements represent a dozen lifetimes.

Recognized By Nation.

Until 1916 he received an allowance of only 4,000 francs annually with which he managed to carry on his research work. From that time on his fame spread rapidly. The municipal council agreed to pension him and he was made an officer of the legion of honor. Toward the end of the same year the academy of political and moral sciences awarded him the prix audiffred in recognition of his devotion to duty.

Today Charles Vaillant is a symbol of heroic self-sacrifice. His hospital room is a mecca of senators, public officials and members of the French academy.

DUBLIN CITY HALL BOMBED

Insurgents Also Rake Free State Army Posts With Machine Gun Fire.

DUBLIN, Jan. 16.—The city hall and several free state army posts were bombed and raked with machine gun fire by republican insurgents during the night.

Two soldiers and four civilians were wounded in the fighting. The crash of bombs and rattle of machine guns with intermittent revolver-shots kept the city in an uproar until early today.

The guerilla warfare, with the rebels taking the offensive, followed announceemnt by the free state that four insurgents were executed for possessing arms.

The department of agriculture announced the storage stock of sweet potatoes totalled 2,994 532 bushels December 15, or about 10,000 bushels less than a year ago.

Blair, Neb.—"I think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a fine tonic for young girls as well as grown women. My first experience with the 'Prescription' was quite a few years ago when my daughter was in an extremely nervous condition and suffered with irregularity. Just a half bottle of the 'Prescription' cured her of both the nervousness and the feminine trouble and proved to be an excellent tonic besides. Several months afterward (at middle life) I myself was in a very nervous state and the half bottle of 'Prescription' that my daughter had left I took, and found it to be just as efficient in my case as it had been in hers. It is a specific that is unequalled for women."—Mrs. L. H. Lothrop, 211 E. Lincoln St.

CHLOROFORM THE REMEDY

THAT IS WHAT CHARLES GRAFF HAS SUGGESTED.

Thinks That Is Due the "State Department of Agriculture" and Its Inspection System.

"The state should be more liberal in the future if the Nebraska state fair is to be conducted along the lines befitting our great state" President Charles Graff told the members of the Nebraska state board of agriculture in his annual address Tuesday afternoon.

President Graff said that with unfavorable weather conditions and reduced crops in 1922 it was only a question of the size of the deficit at the 1922 fair. Better housing facilities are needed for the exhibits and unless the state comes to the rescue little progress will be made.

"The state fair property is now worth $1,000,000 and it takes considerable money to operate such a vast concern," he declared.

He pointed out that the matter of granting concessions is one of the real problems of state fair management. In the past several years such people have preyed upon minors, male and female, and have proved a source of trouble. President Graff indicated that the management is refusing to grant concessions to people who operate games of chance and of alleged skill and is now replacing them with more wholesome attractions.

Speaking of "the unnecessary and expensive dual form of government" in the past four years he said:

"I think little question now remains after four years of trial that what is called the 'department of agriculture' should be chloroformed and thus give the people relief from a regiment of inspectors whose chief qualifications are quite regularly drawing their salaries and nosing in other people's business."

The board devoted considerable time to a revision of the state fair premium list it being necessary to make many changes because of shifting conditions.

Committees were appointed and nominations submitted to elect fifteen new members for the board of agriculture for a term of two years each. Most of the old members whose terms expire in 1923 are candidates for reelection. The state board consists of twenty-nine members, fourteen to be named each even year and fifteen each odd year.

Gossip about the meeting is to the effect that old officers of the board and the board of state fair managers will be reelected. It has been customary to give them a second term. E. R. Danielson has been secretary of the state board of agriculture and the state fair board for many years. Two years ago he was given an advance in salary and his compensation is now $5,000 per year.

Wednesday morning the old board will name its officers and Wednesday afternoon the new board will convene and begin to make plans for the 1923 Nebraska state fair.

HOW MACBETH'S CASTLE LOOKS TODAY

This ancient Scottish stronghold, home of the earl of Strathmore is the scene about which Shakespeare laid the tragedy of his "Macbeth." It is the place where Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, reported engaged to one of King George's sons, was born.

For generations the castle has been noted for the strange "secret" hidden in one of its rooms. This secret is revealed by every earl of Strathmore to his son when the latter becomes of age. None other has learned it. Various theories have been advanced toward solution of the mystery, but the secret remains guarded.

Situated in the gray north of Scotland, far from the beaten paths of tourists, Glamis castle is the scene about which Shakespeare laid the tragedy of his "Macbeth." The castle is a short distance from the famous Birnam Wood, the moving of which against the castle warned the Thane of his coming doom. Nearby is the blasted neath, where Macbeth met the witches and was told of having been created by Duncan Thane of Cawdor. A few miles farther on is Cawdor castle.

Just inside the Glamis structure is a short stairway, at the top of which is a short hall, where Lady Macbeth is said to have received information of King Duncan's proposed visit. In a small apartment with an antechamber the king was slain by Macbeth whose coat of mail still hangs in the great hall, just outside.

FLAYS MODERN CHURCHES

Dr. Grant Declares Clergyman Could Say as Much on Street Corner as in Edifice.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Standing firmly upon the ground established in his sermon of Sunday, despite criticism from other clergymen, Dr. Percy Stickney Grant today announced that next Sunday he would develop further his theme of more advanced thought pertaining to religion.

"We must sweep the cobwebs from our minds," declared Grant in an interview. "Tradition, mysticism, superstition, must give way to scientific facts. There must, too, be an awakening of the spirit of tolerance. When men and women realize that they are not to be rescued from their worldly problems by miracles, that the hands of a priest passed over them will not relieve them in their trials, but that the solution of their problems is to be found within themselves, then will men and women turn to the development of their minds, and thought and intelligent work will take the place of superstition."

Dr. Grant's utterance in his Fifth avenue church of the Ascension has aroused comment throut the country. He opposed the consecration of churches, and in elaborating on his subject in his interview today declared:

"What do you suppose was Christ's conception of the church? Did He preach in magnificent edifices? The Christianity of Christ's day was typified by a simple man walking about the countryside preaching wherever followers might gather to listen. One of His greatest sermons was delivered from a mountainside.

"Is it not possible for a man, a clergyman, a teacher, to say as much on a street corner as within the walls of a costly, tax-exempt pile of stone? The partial use of over 200,000 churches in the United States is one of the most wasteful facts in the country.

"Christianity of the early days was the hope, the refuge, of the poor and the downtrodden. But I fear the poor are sort of out of it now."

A heavy wave of criticsm has been directed at Dr. Grant because of his expression of opinion that Christ did not have the power of God. To this he replied:

"What is God? We call God the power which is responsible for the universe—its creation and continuation. But we may as well face facts. Christ was a wonderful man, a beautiful character. He was the superlative of anything you may choose to call him. But to say that a man born upon this earth, created by the power of God, had the power of this God, creation, is superstition."

BANDITS RENT SMALL HOUSE

HEADQUARTERS LESS THAN BLOCK FROM DENVER MINT.

Dead Robber Found in Private Garage Thought to Be J. C. Sloan for Whom Search Had Been Made.

DENVER, Jan. 16.—A small one room house, less than a block from the United States mint here, was the rendezvous of the bandits who staged the sensational $200,000 holdup in which a bank guard was killed and one of the bandits fatally wounded December 18. Five men rented the house a few days before the robbery, according to Mrs. Louise Speegle, owner of the place.

Police believe the dead bandit, whose body was found in an automobile in a garge Sunday where it had lain since the holdup, was a man named J. C. Sloan, for whom a search has been conducted since the raid.

An investigation of the police department's failure to discover the bandit's body before has been ordered by Frank M. Downer, manager of safety. Orders were issued the day following the robbery that police search every private and public garage in Denver for the bandit car. This was not done, according to Downer.

WOULD PUT LIMIT ON TRAIN LENGTH

Representative Gordon Doesn't Want Freights to Be Any Longer Than Half a Mile in Nebraska Hereafter.

The old fifty-car train bill made its biennial appearance in the house Tuesday morning, when Representative Gordon introduced a measure providing that no freight train shall be operated that is longer than half a mile. Mr. Gordon is an old railroad man, now a farmer. He also introduced a bill requiring three men on a light engine operated outside of yard limits.

The last legislature considered such a bill, but referred it to the state railway commission. That body said that when the legislature passed a law that settled it, and that the commission had no jurisdiction to modify or change it.

Grand Island is anxious to have the federal government take over the soldiers' home near there, and a bill was introduced by Representative Rourke offering it to the federal government for purposes that will mean its perpetual maintenance. The new bills were as follows:

H. R. No. 113, by Gordon—Making it unlawful for any railroad company to operate any freight train exceeding 2,640 feet in length, exclusive of locomotive and caboose. Penalty $100 to $500 for each offense.

H. R. No. 114, by Gordon—Making it an offense for railroads to operate, outside of yard limits, any light engine which is not manned with a crew consisting of one engineer, one fireman and one conductor.

H. R. No. 115, by Allan—Authorizing the county board of Douglas county to pay any additional counsel needed in civil actions to which the county is party such reasonable compensation as may be agreed upon for the month or year. Emergency.

H. R. No. 116, by Rourke—Providing a method by which the heads of religious bodies may convene meetings where the proposed corporation shall be one exercising its powers in a territory co-extensive with the jurisdiction of such heads, and naming the representatives who may take part. Emergency.

H. R. No. 117, by Rourke—Directing the governor to tender to the United States government the lands and buildings now used as a state soldiers' and sailors' hospital at Burket, near Grand Island, for purposes of hospitalization for the veterans and their wives and widows of all wars.

H. R. No. 118, by Densmore, by request—Including butter along with milk and cream in the dairy products that may not be sold when taken from any animal that is sick or diseased, or fifteen days preceding partruition, when milk is normal, when contaminated water or unwholesome food has been consumed, when kept in an unhealthful condition or when not tuberculin tested.

H. R. No. 119, by Keifer—Appropriating $75,000 for the purpose of continuing work of eradicating bovine tuberculosis. Emergency.

Attorney General Spillman has filed in supreme court a brief in opposition to the request of James B. O'Connor that he be given a new trial. O'Connor was convicted in Adams county of uttering a false and forged will in an effort to get a large share of the John O'Connor estate, over which many legal battles have been fought. Mr. Spillman discusses at length the various points made in support of the appeal. He says that the conviction is sustained by the evidence, that the jury was properly instructed, and that there is nothing to the claim that the law under which he was convicted is unconstitutional. He says it is beyond belief that O'Connor, with his wide acquaintance in Hastings, would have gone 250 miles to a strange city, have a strange lawyer draw up his will, and have it witnessed by strangers. The lawyer died a year later from paresis, and lawyers testified he was not capable of drawing a will unless he had a form before him. O'Connor was sentenced to from two to seven years.

GUIDE ROCK, Neb., Jan. 15.—Harm Robbins, forty-nine years old, was shot to death at North Branch, a small inland town just across the Nebraska-Kansas line, nine miles south of here, by his son, Arthur Robbins, Sunday evening, during a family quarrel. Mr. Robbins was postmaster at North Branch for the past fifteen years, and also conducted a drug store there. It is understood that Robbins was choking Mrs. Robbins when the boy appeared on the scene, and grabbing a shotgun which was near, shot the father. The funeral will be Wednesday. The authorities have taken the boy to Mankato, Kas.

UNIVERSITY IN FOR CHECK

RESOLUTION IN HOUSE SEEKS TO FOLLOW MONEY.

Movement on Foot to Ascertain What Instituion Does With Its Appropriation.

Representative James Auten, democrat of Albion, wants to know where the money goes before he votes any more for maintenance of the state university. He introduced a resolution in the house Monday which, if adopted, puts it up to departmental heads of the state's major educational institute, to furnish to a legislative committee a detailed showing of the distribution of the appropriation of two years ago.

Malcolm Baldridge, member of the Douglas county delegation, objected to consideration of the resolution without time for calculation and under the house rules, it went over for one day. Mr. Baldridge does not oppose the principle of knowing where the money goes and for what. He does want to know whether or not university authorities are able to furnish the information without too much delay and expense.

The Auten resolution suggests that many taxpayers are laboring under the impression that the expenditures of the university have been and are excessive and that the report of the bursar is obscure in that it deals for the most part in generalities. The author of the resolution sets forth the desire for economy and for a comprehensive understanding of the facts in the matter of university expenditures. The resolution recites:

"Be it resolved that the heads of the various departments of the University of Nebraska be requested to submit to a committee to be appointed by the speaker, a separate typewritten report of all the expenditures of their departments, avoiding generalities and setting out in detail all of the expenditures of the past two years, however minute. These reports to be delivered to the chairman of the committee by the heads of the various departments not later than February 1. It is further recommended that no appropriations be made until said reports are submitted as above directed."

Mr. Auten said that the purpose, in the event of house approval of the resolution, is to see to it that the committee goes before the finance committee to unfold such information as it may gather. And if the finance group should not treat the report in a manner satisfactory to members of the special committee, then the data may be carried to the floor of the house.

Members of the house who are not opposed to the gathering of reasonable data from university authorities, suggest that any information submitted should come before February 1, date named in the resolution. They do not want the finance committee to be forced to hold back appropriations any longer than is necessary.

By a vote of 79 to 12, the house swamped the proposal to install amplifiers or mechanical speakers. Representative James W. Lundy, chairman of the committee to investigate the workings of the apparatus and cost of same, championed the cause until he saw the almost unanimous trend in the negative. Then he voted "no" when the roll was called on whether or not the committee should be authorized to proceed. Houre economists exhibited little or no patience with the scheme intended to carry the voice to all parts of the hall in spite of the noise connected with capitol construction.

By unanimous vote, all members present, the house committee on miscellaneous subjects sent the Strehlow bill, aimed at the ku klux klan out to general file with favorable recommendation. No one appeared in committee either for or against the measure which prohibits persons, without authority of law, to declare or enforce orders against others, prohibits meeting in disguise to conceal identity for the purpose of carrying out threats, discussing or holding pretended hearings to determine the guilt or innocence of any person and to prevent the usurping, impersonating or assuming the functions of or interfering with the duties of judicial, executive and peace officers.

Ex-Lieutenant Governor P. A. Barrows appeared before the house committee on claims. He desires pay for 140 days at $23 99 per day. He claims that the state is indebted to him because of services rendered while the governor was out of the state. He told committeemen that he protested for two reasons; that he performed the duties of governor as required by the constitution and that the time has come when a state officer should know whether or not he will be paid for services performed. Chairman Vance announced that no action on the claim will be taken until the committee has received an opinion from the attorney general's office Claimant urged that it is up to the legislature to establish a precedent. He said that during the past four years he has occupied the chair of the governor more than one-eighth of the time. And during such time, he said, it has been necessary for him to hire a man to look after his outside work. He explained that the constitution makes it clear that during the absence from the state of the governor the duties, powers and emoluments shall fall upon the lieutenant governor. And Mr. Webster, he says, defines emoluments as money. It is not his fault, he says, that some one else drew the money that should have come to him.

Representative Reynolds and others introduced a resolution in the house Monday urging that congress be memorialized to raise the limit of federal land bank loans to the individual from $10,000 to $25,000. It carried by unanimous vote.

Too Much Service

The Newark Star-Eagle tells the story of a venerable tomcat which had been official rat catcher for a Turkish caliph for many years that certainly "points a moral and adorns a tale." The story runs: As old age came upon Tom and he felt his muscles stiffening he determined to make the sacred pilgrimage to Mecca before it was too late and the gates of the cat paradise were closed to him.

So he called his only son, a handsome young cat, to him and, outlining the duties of the office, placed him in charge and departed on his pilgrimage to the sacred city.

Time passed and the aged cat returned. In the street near his master's house he was amazed to encounter an emaciated cat, skin clinging to its ribs, fur gone in spots and other evidences of extreme feline poverty, beneath which guise he detected the lineaments of his once sleek son. After embracing the youth, the venerable tomcat questioned him:

"By what favor of Allah have you come to this misery, my son?"

"I am wholly at loss to account for it, father," moaned the youth. "As soon as you departed I set about the business destroying rats in the noble caliph's house, and by the end of the first week there was not a rat living. To my surprise, shortly after this the servants drove me from the house, calling me a useless beast, though I had ridden the house of all its pests. Since then I have starved."

The old tomcat shook his head:

"Alas, my son, you have made the error of youth! By all means you should have killed the rats, but not all the rats. There is such a thing in this life as too much service. Remember the words of the prophet, that perfection is for the hereafter only."

This ancient legend, so the story goes, has been adopted as a rule and guide for public service from that day to this. It is a rule and guide at the Central Hotel Cafe (1325 P street) where you will find "food and service that will please you"—food of first quality, properly cooked and served without delay and without fussiness, prompt service—but not too much.—Ad

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No other Laxative can replace Dr. Caldwell's in the confidence of those who use it

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grownups, so compounded that elderly people, who are constantly forced to take a laxative because the intestinal muscles are weakening, find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for 30 years, and over 10 million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world! The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

Millions of carefully conducted homes are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mr. J. B. Belk of Shaw, Miss., relies on it entirely to keep his children in health, and Mrs. Catherine Connolly of Jersey City, N. J., declares that not only herself but all her neighbors and friends use it and tell others about it. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, flatulency, auto-intoxication, biliousness, intestinal poisoning, headaches, colic and cramps, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, coal-tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

The Attractive Woman

is free from foot worry

She radiates cheer, good nature, happiness. She trips down the street with freedom in every step. She may be a home-maker, a professional woman or a young business girl. She moves about her work in home or office with ease.

She knows from experience the connection between bodily comfort and mental freedom, hence she dresses with a view to securing both. She knows that her feet are an important part of her anatomy; that to be at her best physically, mentally—anywhere, any time—she must be unconscious of them.

The Cantilever Shoe is made with flexible shank which fits the arch of the foot, giving helpful support without hampering the play of muscles. It gives freedom to the toes and to the whole foot structure. It permits better circulation. Cantilever Shoes induce correct poise—so necessary to the proper functioning of every organ of the body, which, physicians say, means greater endurance, better health, glowing color, increased physical charm.

In these shoes you don't have to sacrifice appearance for comfort. In them you will find the neatly rounded toe and medium heel of fashion.

Be fitted to a pair tomorrow and see if you cannot end your particular foot worries. Widths AAAA to E.

BODY DRAGGED INTO AN OMAHA HOSPITAL

Two Strange Men Leave Unidentified Man in Corridor of University Hospital and Flee.

OMAHA, Jan. 16.—Two men early this morning dragged the body of an unidentified man into the corridor of University hospital here, exclaiming: "Here's a patient for you," and fled. The man had been shot at close range in the groin and was dead when Miss Dora Hofeldt, night nurse, reached his side.

A letter addressed "Earl Williams, general delivery, Omaha," with a return address of Mrs. Esther Thorpe, Charles City, Io., $60 in cash and cards of tre J. and A. Auto repair shop (Jerry Johnson and David Anderson, proprietors), 319 West Seventh street, no city, were found on the body. The letter was mailed in Minneapolis.

Police believe the man was shot in a suburban resort. A short time previous a taxi driver reported seeing a man spattered with blood walking in the streets.

WORKED NEAR PRISON WALLS

Life Termer Was Within Forty Miles of Scene of Escape for Two Years.

OMAHA, Jan. 16.—Raymond Conklin, alias K. Burleigh, a life-termer, who tunneled his way out of the state prison at Joliet, Ill., in 1919, told police here Sunday night that he worked on the Chicago, Milwaukee railroad within forty miles of the prison walls for nearly two years after his escape.

Conklin's downfall followed the holdup of a moving picture theater in San Francisco. He said he and two accomplices held up the theater, hoping to get about $3,000 so he could have an operation performed on his lungs.

"I was told I would die if I didn't obtain the operation," he said. "So we decided to stick up the theater. My two buddies are now in San Quentin prison. I'll die in Joliet."

"Prison officials and guards rode on trains on which I worked," said Conklin, who was kept in the city jail here for safe keeping by Illinois State Parole Officer Harry H. Gerber.

Conklin was convicted of being an accomplice in a murder in Chicago in 1911. He said he was charged with being with a man who killed another.

"Some one made the hole in the wall and I thought it was meant for me," Conklin said.

He was arrested in Sacramento, Cal., after he and two accomplices had held up and robbed the San Francisco theater.

Officer Gerber also brought Walter Scott, another escaped convict from Joliet. Scott, who said he "only killed a woman," was sentenced to serve fifteen years. He escaped about two months after Conklin departed, Gerber said.

PATENT RIGHTS IN LEGISLATION

Allege Conspiracy to Get Grain Dumping Device.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 16.—Alleging conspiracy to gain possession of a patented grain dumping device, E. E. Closson, 2518 South Ninth street, trustee of the estate of the Trapp-Gohr-Donovan company, which company was adjudged bankrupt, December 23, filed suit in federal court.

The defendants are the Trapp-Gohr-Donovan company, the Gohr-Donovan company and their officers, Louis Gohr, 2238 Fowler avenue, and Grover C. Donovan, 2441 Laurel avenue, and Leonard Wolfinger, Chandler apartments, Twenty-fifth street and St. Mary avenue.

Charles Trapp of Savannah, Mo., entered into agreement with the Trapp-Gohr-Donovan company March 25, 1922, whereby the company was to make and distribute the devices, paying him $15 for each one until $30,000 had been paid.

It is alleged this company attempted to transfer the right to the Gohr company and that it contests the right of the trustee of the Trapp-Gohr-Donovan company to sell the contract, which runs for fourteen years.

RETURNING JAPS UNCHEERED

Siberian Occupation Was Unpopular With People.

TOKIO, (By mail)—It was a thin day when the Japanese troops from Siberia reached home.

There were few "Banzais"—there was no warm welcome for returning heroes. Always before when Japanese soldiers came home from foreign fields the country went wild and flew flags for them.

But this time Japan went calmly about is business and made no fuss at all and looked the other way when the soldiers passed.

The Japanese occupation of Siberia was one of the most unpopular things with the Japanese people that the government has ever done.

"It cost Japan almost 1,000,000 yen ($500,000) to study Siberia. The people didn't want the lesson and the militarists learned nothing from it. Why should we cheer the soldiers?" was the tone of a number of newspapers.

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply and gets in its good work right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. Just apply Musterole with the fingers. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster without the blister.

Musterole is a clean white ointment, made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of all sorts. Seldom fails to deliver results. 35c and 65c jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.00.

Better than a mustard plaster.

MUSTEROLE WILL NOT BLISTER

Charges against others on similar grounds may be expected, Coco said.

What Don Ramon Suggested Seemingly Out of Courtesy.

My amusement at Harry Underwood's assumed enthusiasm over New York's cultured advantages did not occupy my mind long. The dread that some time before we should be able to get a train out of Nantucket, Dr. Pettit would have caught up to us, became an obsession as the minutes—and the miles—rolled by.

Dicky and the supposed Don Ramon Almirez kept up the desultory conversation of two travelers thrown together by chance, but I paid no attention to it—indeed, I could not have repeated a word either said. All my faculties were fused into the question:

"Will we get away from Nantucket before Dr. Pettit gets here?"

The query so absorbed me that we had drawn up to the railroad station in Nantucket before I realized that we were halfway to the thriving town, one of the largest in the section. Brother Bill drew his car skilfully to the side of the station platform, jumped out and opened the doors.

"Shall I find out about the trains to New York?" he asked.

"Thanks," Dicky said heartily. "I wish you would, and find out, too, where I can get some breakfast."

"Oh! Haven't you had any breakfast?" I inquired in dismay.

"Nothing but a cup of the worst coffee in the civilized world," he rejoined, "and I warn you that I don't start on any train until I have something to eat."

"Why, did you have a breakdown?" I asked innocently, remembering that he had been a half-hour late at the Tinkinsville rendezvous, and that I mentally had laid the delay to the supposition that he had stopped for breakfast.

A Nerve-Wrecking Delay.

"No, I didn't," he returned sulkily, and with the rejoinder I comprehended what really had happened.

He had wasted a number of minutes after my telephone in sullen angry determination not to meet me. Then his chivalry had vanquished his anger, and he had been compelled to hurry through his dressing and go without his breakfast. My dismay at his hunger vanished, and a healthy resentment at his obstinacy took its place.

Brother Bill appeared at the door of the station with some papers in his hand, which, when he reached us, proved to be timetables of the railroad. He handed one to Dicky and one to the supposed Don Ramon Almirez, as he pronounced the news which made my heart sink below even the low tops of my oxfords.

"The next train won't be along for an hour and a half."

"An hour and a half!" I repeated to myself in dismay. It had been over an hour since we left Mrs. Barker's. By this time Dr. Pettit had been released from the root cellar. If he should happen to strike our trail he would be upon us long before our train should come in. I cast wildly around in my mind for some scheme of getting away from Nantucket immediately, when Harry Underwood spoke in the slow, resonant tones of the character whose role he was essaying:

"We Are Charmed."

"If the ladies will permit me to give them a courtesy in recompense for the so great favor of the ride down here," he said, and I, realizing that it would be wise to assent to anything he might propose, inclined my head.

"A wait here would be of a tediousness unthinkable," he began, "but I imagine that the scenery to be viewed near here would be of a beauty quite unexcelled—is it not so?" He turned with grave inquiry to Brother Bill.

"There's some pretty places hereabouts," Brother Bill answered.

"Then if the ladies will accept from me the courtesy of a drive, I think this so courteous and efficient driver will take them for an hour, bringing them back in time for the train. And over your belated breakfast," he bent toward Dicky, "we can perhaps recollect where, if at all, we have seen each other."

"Suits me," Dicky declared laconically. Indeed, I do not think he could have said anything more without bursting into laughter at the flamboyant diction used by his old comrade.

"We are charmed," I murmured formally.

"It is so kind of you," he returned. "I wonder if you could do me a very little favor."

He stepped to the open door of the taxi on the side next to me, drew from his pocket three short pieces of wire, which he palmed so deftly that I was certain Claire Foster had not seen them. I was sure, however, that for some reason he wished me to notice them.

"If you could give me a piece of paper and a string," he said deferentially. "I wish to wrap this up for safe cartage back to the house we left."

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 17.

The forecast for this day holds some rather disquieting features, according to the conflicting configurations. It would be advisable to remain as quiet as is consistent with the ordinary routine of affairs, avoiding change and new enterprises. Those in the employment of others are under favorable conditions for their present positions, but should not seek change. The utmost discretion is enjoined in social relations.

Those whose birthday it is may have a successful year if they avoid disputes as well as change and new projects. They should also avoid all manner of sensational gossip or rumor. A child born on this day will be active and enterprising, but may jeopardize its success by lack of prudence unless carefully trained.

EVERY GIRL AS WELL AS FASHION HAS ITS DAY

MAY (whispering)—See the picture of that remarkable coiffure? It's of the finest copper wire enameled in any color desired and made into the hairdress best liked. Isn't it too clever? ## WINIFRED BLACK Writes About Living by the Love Sword

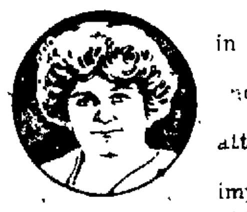
Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.



No, no, my dear—it can't be done!

You can't have your cake and eat it, too.

Thousands of people have tried that—thousands and thousands of them and they have always failed.

Every time they have failed.

There's the young woman from Pittsburgh, for instance.

She went over to Paris and cut a great dash.

Stunning clothes she had, and hats that were really too charming, and little Russian boots, trimmed with fur, and two or three different swagger sticks—one of them had a handle of amber, set in turquoise and one was of beaten silver with her monogram on it in diamonds and sapphires.

And she had a black saddle-horse with a marvelous saddle, and an embroidered saddle-cloth from India.

They Drew Up a Contract

And she had a smart little apartment, looking down over the trees into the Bois de Boulogne, and a smart little maid to wait upon her, and a smart little reception room in white and rose and gold—all cupids and garlands and mirrors, and not a comfortable chair in it, after the immemorial French fashion.

And she had a perfect love of a little poodle—white, with a black smooch over his nose, and the cunningest paws. And she had a gilt cage, made of wicker and standing six feet high, and it was full of love birds, funny little green things with scarlet heads, always snuggling together on the perch. And she had great baskets of violets, and a silver gilt dish of orchids, always on her table.

And there was always a bon-bon dish crammed with the latest things in bon-bons.

And she had a motor car—Oh, very smart, with sky-blue cushions and a discreet chauffeur, who knew everything—and said nothing!

And most of all she had a Prince, a real live Prince, and he was very attentive to her and she admired him very much.

The Prince could not marry the little girl from America. It was important for him to marry someone either with money or a very high social position—and blue eyes and auburn hair do not always bring these things, no matter how attractive they are.

So they drew up a contract and signed it, and the Prince was to love the little girl from America forever and forever, and she was to love him for always and for always and they wouldn't bother with marriage at all.

But now the Prince has changed his mind and does not wish to love the little girl from America, forever and forever. In fact, he appears to think it will never be possible for him to love her any more at all, and so one fine day he kissed her good-by and rode away and she has never seen him since, and now—what do you think?

She has sued him for breach of contract—and the court says she has no case, and now she will have to sell the smart motor car, and discharge the discreet chauffeur and let the smart and so-capable maid go and perhaps she will even have to come home to America again.

And she's astonished and very angry!

The Old Law Reigns

What's the use of a contract, she says, if you can't make the parties to the contract keep it when they change their minds?

"Ah, my dear," says the French judge, "there is but one personal contract between a man as a man and a woman as a woman in this court, and that contract is called by the old-fashioned name of marriage."

And so the new-fashioned contract is thrown aside, and the old-fashioned law holds good.

And so it is from one end of the world to the other.

With all this talk of the "new freedom" and the new ideals, there is just one contract between man as man and woman as woman that holds, and that is so old-fashioned that it is really a little embarrassing to think about it.

But, there it is, my dear, and there it stays, and if you want to protect yourself and the children who may come to you, there is just one way to do it and that way leads through the old-fashioned wedding ring.

He who kills by the sword must perish by the sword—so they said thousands of years ago.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Chats About a Charming Brown Evening Gown Girdled with Silver Roses.

"I WANT to show the newest brown evening model to Miss Fuller," Madame announced to us.

I hastened to don the frock.

"It's a love," Pam commented.

"Yes," I agreed. "I'd like to have it for myself."

The wardrobe mistress was fastening it as we talked.

"You must wear these," said Pam, removing a string of red-amber beads from her neck and clasping it about mine.

"My dear, this is a tribute," I told her. "I know how you prize these beads." I moved over to the light, where I could examine them in the mirror as the morning sun streamed in on them.

"Yes, my favorite aunt brought them to me from Japan," Pam told me. "She'll always remain my favorite aunt for having done it."

"They must be lovely at night," I commented.

"They are," she agreed. "They'd be stunning with that brown."

I wound a bandeau around my head. It was of silver cloth shot with pink, the same material as the roses which girdled the frock.

"That tissue cloth is superb against the brown velvet of the bodice," the wardrobe mistress said.

"And it's very smart, matching this headdress," I said. "I'm glad Madame keeps such a generously-filled box of bandeaux and girdles."

I picked up a little amber fan and moved out before the footlights, where the prospective client could have a good look.

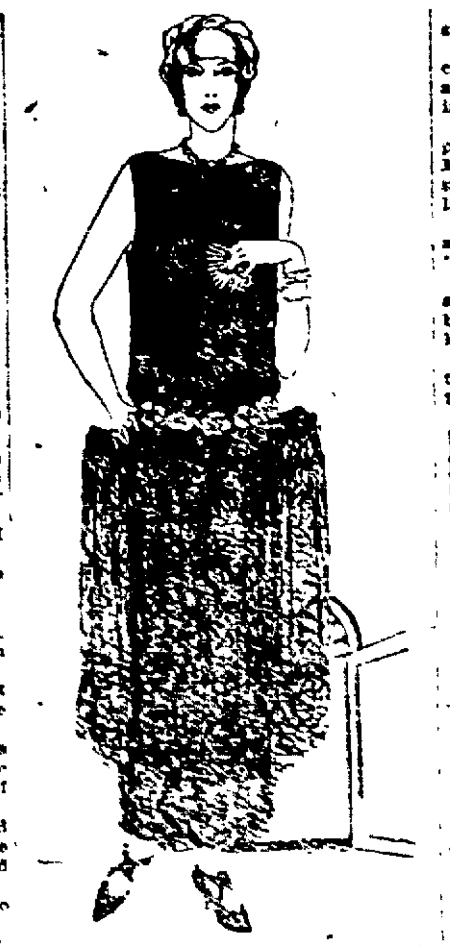
"Perfectly charming," she said to Madame.

The dress was effective, I thought. The bodice was wired out below the girdle of roses, and from here it dropped an overskirt of brown lace over the satin underskirt of brown lace.

"I always want to buy everything brown I see," Miss Fuller confessed with a smile.

"I knew your weakness," Madame said. "I knew you wouldn't resist this frock and I wanted you to have it because I think it suits you so."

"The brown accessories look like brown butterflies," Miss Fuller said.



The Velvet Bodice of This Frock Is Wired Below the Girdle.

"And how do you like the brocaded slippers?" Madame asked.

"Very much," Miss Fuller responded, enthusiastically, glancing at the brown-and-gold brocaded slippers I was wearing.

"Your model has worked out the appointments to her costume beautifully," Miss Fuller said. "I'd love to have the same bandeau and slippers and necklace."

"I can have a bandeau made for you, and get you a fan like it," Madame said. "The beads belong to one of the girls."

Miss Fuller wished to try on the frock, and I hastened back to tell Pam her beads were coveted by the smart young lady.

"If my favorite aunt hadn't given them to me, I'd be tempted to part with them," sighed Pam.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl, and am desperately in love with a young man nearly four years my senior. I have not kept steady company with him, but he wants me to, and then to marry him in January.

I am going with a young man now, but haven't the love for him that I have for the other. I am undecided which one to go with. Please advise me. UNDECIDED.

UNDECIDED: If you cannot make up your mind, my dear, wait until you really fall in love before you become engaged. When you are really in love you will know it and will not be in doubt.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Start to Conquer the Health Bane—Insomnia

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Commissioner of Health, New York City
U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State

DR. COPELAND

WHAT is more terrible than a series of sleepless nights or habitual inability to sleep? Many a suicide has needlessly resulted from the despair of insomnia.

It is common to hear folks speak of a restless night due to some indiscretion in diet. The chief offender against nocturnal rest is the late drinking of coffee.

The moderate use of coffee, like the moderate use of a lot of other things, is safe. It is the abuse of coffee and its use at the wrong time about which we must complain. If I drink strong coffee late at night I cannot sleep, because my sense of hearing has been over-stimulated. Actually, my hearing becomes so acute it seems to me I could hear a leaf strike the next house. Every sound is exaggerated and I am kept awake by the very din.

Tickling in the throat, coughing, pain in the chest and difficult breathing are natural causes of sleeplessness. Any condition where these symptoms are present must be expected to break the rest.

Sleeplessness is complained of sometimes where it does not really exist in any abnormal sense. One cannot expect to sleep till seven in the morning who goes to bed at nine o'clock. Children can sleep indefinitely, but the average adult can get along very well with seven or eight hours of sleep. Indeed, many adults are perfectly well and happy if they have six hours. Therefore, why should you expect to sleep soundly till seven if you go to bed ten hours before that? We must be reasonable even when we find fault with unprotesting Nature.

Excessive smoking, reading too late, working too many hours, worry and mental strain of every sort are factors of importance in dealing with insomnia. They may be at the foundation of the failure to woo sleep.

One of the most frequent and, for some reason, one of the most commonly overlooked causes of sleeplessness is constipation. The first questions I ask of a patient who speaks of insomnia relate to his intestinal condition and his eating habits. For some reason intestinal absorption is productive of nervous reactions which disturb sleep.

One reason why many people sleep poorly is because they go to bed to think, to read, to smoke, to sew, to do everything except to sleep. If you form the habit of going to bed for no other purpose than to get a night's sleep it will help a lot. Open your window wide, put out all the lights, have no more covering than is necessary to keep you comfortable, and compose yourself to sleep.

If you are restless and fussy do not toss too long, but turn on the light and read for a while. Anybody can give you a list of books to read which will drive the most alert brain to speedy rest.

Sometimes a glass of hot milk, a cracker or two—any light lunch—will aid your sleep. Heavy suppers just before bedtime are bad things, and the dyspepsia they cause and aggravate will increase the insomnia.

If there is uncorrected eyestrain, overfatigue from any cause, or undue anxiety, there can be no hope of happy nights without correction.

Seek the cause of your particular case of insomnia, and if you do not discover it, take your problem to your doctor, who will wisely help to solve it and make it again possible for you to sleep.

Answers to Health Questions

M. V. R. M. Q—I am a girl 15 years old and 5 feet 5 inches in height. How much should I weigh?

A—You should weigh about 120 pounds.

* * *

T. H. O'C. Q—After taking a bath, I suffer from a terrible itching. Will you kindly tell me what causes this?

A—As you suffer only after bathing, your condition is probably due to nervousness or irritation from the soap, which may not agree with your skin. However, for temporary relief from the intense itching, add about one-half pound of hyposulphite of soda to one-half tub of water. If these measures do not relieve you, have your physician make a thorough examination to determine the cause of your trouble. Then he can outline the treatment.

* * *

R. F. D. Q—I have been wearing glasses for the past three years for eyestrain. As yet, I have not noticed any improvement in my condition. Will you kindly tell me what I can do to obtain a permanent cure and discontinue wearing the glasses?

A—No doubt if you had not been wearing glasses, you would be very much worse off than you are today. You may have to continue wearing glasses an indefinite length of time.

* * *

L. A. Q—Would it be beneficial or injurious to the scalp to rub it about once a week with a salt towel?

A—Massage of the scalp is always advisable, as it increases the circulation. A salt towel is not necessary.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

The Way Mrs. Browning Found Love as Well as Fame.

OF ALL the women poets of the world there is none who stands out with more radiance than Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

This woman, who enriched English literature with her beautiful novel in poetry, "Aurora Leigh," and adorned it with her exquisite "Sonnets from the Portuguese," was the daughter of a rich West Indian merchant of England.

Elizabeth Barrett was born in 1809, and during her early life struggled through one illness after another. She was a very precocious child. On account of her delicate physique she could not romp and play like other children. Instead, she read and studied and wrote rhymes.

When she was a young girl her adored brother was drowned before her eyes at Torquay, where she had gone for her health. This tragedy broke her completely. For years after she lived in a large darkened room—a confirmed invalid.

But her life was not one of indolence because of this physical handicap. She wrote and wrote exquisitely.

Romance was her great theme. And as it was so much of her life and mind it seemed only fitting that even into this sick room it should find its way.

Robert Browning read and was charmed by her poems. He begged permission to call on the poetess. There in the presence of her nurse he declared his love for her, and begged her to marry him. He was six years younger than she.

Realising what a burden she would be to him, Elizabeth declined. But this did not prevent the great poet from continuing to implore her to be his wife.

This was not the only difficulty. Her father absolutely had forbidden any of his three daughters to marry.

Browning was forbidden to enter the Barrett house. So the lovers had to communicate through the mail. These wonderful love letters were published after their deaths.

Elizabeth's father declared that if she married she could never enter his house again.

He Begged Her to Marry Him.

But these two loved each other so deeply that Elizabeth's health and her father's threats could not keep them apart.

The invalid ran away and was secretly married to her poet lover. They left England and went to the continent. Elizabeth never again saw her home. Her father never forgave her.

But her husband's love was sufficient. For their life together is one of the beautiful romances of history.

Although a very frail woman, Elizabeth Barrett Browning bore a son. Her life was then complete.

This happy family lived in Italy and wrote together. Their home was in Florence. You can see there today their home, marked by a tablet over the door, in Italian, reading:

"Here wrote and died Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who in the heart of a woman joined the science of a scholar, and the spirit of a teacher, and, who made, with her golden verse, a nuptial ring between Italy and England. Grateful Florence places this memorial."

"Everything About the Home Helps to Make the Home"

Solving the Problem of Correct Shades for the Windows.

WHAT lids are to the eyes, shades are to windows. From land's end to land's end there are millions of windows, and but a small percentage are shadeless, and only a comparatively small number of the shades are home-made. Surely, window-shade manufacturers should be prosperous.

For block after block in our cities the windows are shaded with light yellowish-tan Holland shades of varying quality, and almost all are finished with a simple hem at the bottom. A few shades have a fringe of linen to match or a coarse lace border of the same color. Changing fashions pass lightly over window shades, with but now and then a change, such as the revival of deep scallops on the bottom, which has just occurred after a lapse of fifteen years, or some other trifling variation. Some of us remember the old spatter-work shade decoration, which is still seen in far-away farmhouses "down East." Fern patterns were the favorites, and some of them were very artistic. Hand blocked shades were considered very smart in their turn, but we rarely see examples of this work today.

Double-faced shades, white on one side and colored on the other, are used occasionally, but are voted rather heavy. The use of a double set—plain green shades made—provides for light-colored shades on ordinary occasions, and the green, when the sunlight is too strong.

Glazed chintz or cambric shades have their admirers, but they are rather too gay and colorful to suit all tastes. There are a few of the so-called "peasant shades" made to order. The painting starts at each lower corner, and the pattern runs up the centre to the top of the lower sash, so that when the draperies are looped back, the medallion fills the empty space—rather a fanciful idea in decoration, but effective at a distance.

Shade pulls have become quite a feature recently. The shade cord with the pull is often the color peak of the room's decoration, for the cord matches the pull and not the shade in the present order of things. Large crocheted rings are used, as are also tassels of china, painted wooden beads, large sealing-wax balls in charming color shading, wax or china plaques, painted or plain, Chinese silk tassels with bead ornamentation and carved and painted wooden figures, fruit, baskets or vegetables, animals or birds.

In choosing pulls, be careful to see that they are suitable in every way to the room in which they are used, and also pleasant to live with. If you dislike cats, don't choose black cats with their backs humped up because they look well with your yellow shades and yellow-and-black slip-covers, for your dislike is sure to recur every time you grasp the cat to raise and lower the shade. Choose rather a crow, toucan, or even an old black dog's head—anything that is pleasant and suitable.

In a pretty gray bedroom the gray shades had pulls of gray parrots with pink topknots and pink-tipped feathers, and for decorative license the tail feathers had been pink-tipped. The effect was charming. The birds were of carved wood. In a quaint nursery, yellow shades had for pulls different barnyard fowls carved in wood, about three inches tall, and painted in natural colors. Their yellow claws or web feet rested on strips of wooden grass. There was a bedtime story in every pull.

Little Dresden-china wreaths are very dainty and pretty, but are also a bit frail. There are various pottery ornaments which are stronger, among them tiny yellow jugs, brown pottery discs, old blue Chinese monkeys and other fancies not easily broken.

Painted wooden figures are favorites for nursery use. They are chosen from song or story. These figures are about three inches tall. Embroidered pulls are quite new. The linen is embroidered with a flower basket for each side, then the basket is mounted on pasteboard, cut to fit. The edges are plainly finished by turning in or a little crocheted edge of scallops a half-inch in width may be added.

BETTY'S TRIP WITH GOCOMEBACK.

OH, PSHAW!" Betty cried, when her mama called her in from her play to take her bath. "If there's one thing I do hate to do it's to take a bath—especially when I'm having such a good time. I just wish I never did have to get in that old bath-tub."

"My goodness!" laughed a merry voice, and Gocomeback, the little travel elfin, hopped down from the porch-rail beside Betty. "Wouldn't you be pretty if you never had a bath! Gracious! If you lived with a little friend of mine you might have some occasion to complain."

"I suppose she never has to take a bath," laughed Betty, rather ashamed of her outburst. "Well, I don't really wish that exactly, but I always did hate to stop playing to take a bath. Where does your little friend live?"

"Well, the little girl I referred to lives in Japan," replied the elfin, "and the funny thing about it is, I was just on my way there when I heard you complaining, and I thought maybe—"

"Indeed, I should just love to go," cried Betty. "Maybe, when I come home, I'll change my mind about bathing." Laughing merrily, she took Gocomeback's hand, and away they sailed through the air, over the mountains and seas to the little Japanese girl's home.

They stopped at a beautiful house that stood beside a little stream. It was much larger than Betty's house, with many, many rooms. The walls were of wood, and the roof of black tiles. The front wall, which fitted into grooves, was thrown open so Betty could see from the front to the back of the house. The inner walls were all of fine lattice-work, filled in with fancy paper panes.

"Well, of All Things!"

Gocomeback knocked, and the little Japanese girl, herself, answered. She was glad to see Gocomeback, and gave him a great, big hug.

"Betty, this is Tut-san, and Tut-san, this is little Betty from America. I was on my way here to see you when I saw she was in trouble," Gocomeback laughed.

"And you stopped, as you always do, to help her out." And Tut-san patted the elfin's head. "Oh, Gocomeback! What a wonderful world this would be if all little folk knew you as I do. And now, Miss Betty, what was your complaint? I never shall forget how one day when I was called in to take my bath, I cried, and Gocomeback came, and before I knew what was going on I was whisked to Kee-too's house in the land of ice and snow. When I saw how she had to bathe, I mighty soon grew ashamed of myself, and from that day to this I've never complained."

"Isn't that funny!" Betty laughed. "That was just what I was fussing about."

"And Gocomeback brought you here?" asked Tut-san. "Well, of all things! I must admit I never did like bathing. But since that trip with Gocomeback I am glad to have the chance. You know in Japan we bathe every day. Oh, yes, indeed we do!" she laughed, when she spied the strange expression on Betty's face. "My, I should say we do. Don't you?"

"No, I'm afraid I don't," and Betty was really ashamed. "I fuss when Mama calls me."

"Well, I used to hate to light the fire under the tub," laughed Tut-san, "but I don't suppose you have to do that."

She took Betty and Gocomeback upstairs to the bathroom. There stood a wooden tub with a stone box under it filled with charcoal.

"Every morning that charcoal is lighted, and every one in the family takes a bath."

"I'll never complain again," laughed Betty. Like a dream everything vanished, and she stood once more alone in her own yard. Laughing merrily, she ran into the house and took her bath without another word.

EMILE COUE'S MOST RECENTLY WRITTEN ARTICLES ON AUTO-SUGGESTION

(Copyright, 1923, United States, Great Britain, Canada and South America, by North American Newspaper Alliance and New York World (Press Publishing Company). All rights reserved. Unlicensed reproduction in full or in part expressly prohibited.)

When, under the shadow of the Statue of Liberty, I found myself bombarded with questions by a score of newspaper representatives who had come aboard the Majestic specially to meet by humble person, I began to have a faint idea of the interest awakened over here by the announcement of my lecture tour. When I found myself escorted soon afterwards by stalwart American policemen from the ship to the automobile waiting to convey me to my temporary home with friends; and when I caught sight of the crowds gathered to welcome me I was inexpressibly surprised and touched that I should be considered worthy of such a reception. Shall I be accused of lack of modesty if I say that I am proud and gratified to have been greeted thus? I think not; because I know that all this sympathy and interest must be attributed to the characteristic keenness of Americans to learn and probe to a deeper degree the methods of Auto-suggestion associated with my name.

Since my arrival at New York, the memory of which will never be effaced, I have not ceased to marvel at all I have seen and heard and read. Of my general impressions I shall have a lot to say later on. For the moment I am still dominated by that feeling of surprise which seized me at my first contact with the American people. In fact, my wonderment has grown every day with the realization of ideas which many people seem to have formed of me and my powers. I do not want people to have a sort of fanatical belief in me. It is true, of course, that blind faith is always an asset in favor of a sick person's chances of getting well. People who come to me with the belief already established in their minds that they are going to be cured are more than halfway on the road to recovery before they see me. But the number of persons who can come into direct contact with me must of necessity be infinitely small, and even if I possessed any extraordinary magnetic power to heal—which, I emphatically declare I do not— the results of such power would be limited, for obvious reasons; whereas, there are no limitations to the potentialities of the system I teach. I mean that I cannot reach everyone, but everyone can practice Auto-suggestion. My aim, therefore, is solely to show you how to cure yourselves. Rid yourself of the utterly wrong idea that I can cure. I am not a healer.

I had a first inkling of the mistake America was making when newspaper reporters on the Majestic addressed me as "Doctor" and "Professor," and I was obliged to correct them with reminders that "I am not a doctor; I am not a professor." The papers continue to talk of the cures I have effected in my "clinics"—a bad word, by the way, for the little gatherings at which I meet a selected number of patients in order to endeavor to convince them that by following my methods of auto-suggestion they can cure themselves, or at least gain appreciable improvement. Yes, it has been my joy to see many of these poor sufferers benefit from my teaching; but my joy will be still greater if I succeed in spreading faith in those methods to hundreds of thousands of others and instill in them the knowledge that they can cure themselves without seeing me at all. And it will be impossible to attain that goal if the impression be allowed to persist that it is necessary to come into personal contact with me in order to obtain results.

Unfortunately, it is very difficult to convince some people that I do not exercise a certain influence over them. When I tell them that they must count upon themselves, not upon me, they often reply "I don't care what you say, you do wield power, and when I am with you I get better results than when I am alone." Well, that may be true in many cases. But the reason is, as I have already indicated, that a person who has faith enough to come to me is already half-cured by that very faith.

There is another aspect of the question. If I possessed any real power, surely it should have the same effect upon all. Yet that is not the case. Upon some my influence is absolutely nil. Upon others it may be immense. Which proves that it is not and cannot be an essential factor in the efficacy of my system. It exists merely in the imagination of certain persons, and as I have explained—I hope convincingly—in previous articles, the imagination is all-powerful, so in such instances it really does aid recovery of health. But it would be a sorry action to allow it to be thought that personal contact with me is necessary. I want American citizens all over the continent to understand that all they need is a proper comprehension of the principles of auto-suggestion—that is simplicity itself—together with a belief in its effectiveness.

I do not claim to have invented anything. I have merely reduced to a simple formula for everyday use and practice theories which were known to be truths thousands of years ago. Still less have I invented a new faith, as some would appear to infer. The other day a gentleman, interviewed by one of your newspapers, described my method of auto-suggestion as a "direct challenge to the church." I confess I fail to see any relation between religion and auto-suggestion. is medicine a challenge to the church? Auto-suggestion is only the use of natural forces and functions of our being, and can be practiced by Catholics and protestants, Islamists or Buddhists, without violating any of the precepts or doctrinal principles of those churches or religions. Did not Saint Paul write of the "faith that moveth mountains?" Surely it cannot be wrong to make use of the faculties which the Creator Himself has given us!

Other religious leaders look askance at auto-suggestion because it has come to be associated with allegd "miracles" which I am supposed to have worked. Now, miracles do not exist. I have never accomplished any, and never shall. As a matter of fact, the so-called "miraculous" cures are the simplest and the most easily explained of all. They prove that, actually, the sufferers only thought they were sick. Thought produced (or prolonged) the symptoms; and in that respect they were really sick. But directly they were made to realize that their ills could be overcome by imagination they were cured.

It may seem rather unnecessary for me to answer the few criticisms of which I have been the object in the atmosphere of exceptionally sympathetic interest in which I find myself. But I am anxious to clear the path of my American tour of all misunderstandings. I wish to be taken seriously by serious-minded people. I want everyone to be convinced that the theories I advance, reduced as they are to their simplest expression, are nevertheless built upon a groundwork of scientific fact.

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonial letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious."—Mrs. GEORGE W. BURCHELL, Glens Falls, N. Y.

MILD MANNERED APACHES

FRENCH CUTTHROATS PUZZLE THE PARIS COURTS.

Leader of Murder Gang Was Quiet Wholesale Butcher Who Coldly Plotted Deaths for Fortune.

PARIS.—(By Mail.)—If any doubt persisted regarding the disappearance of the Apache of fiction—the Paris 'bad man" in the velvet cap pulled over one eye, bolero coat and corduroy trousers fitting tightly around his ankles and held up by a gorgeous sash, cigaret butt hanging nonchalantly from his lower lip—it would be dispelled by a visit to the central criminal court where fourteen members of the Villette gang appeared for trial.

Half a dozen brutal murders, scores of robberies with violence, swindling games of all kinds are set down on the police records as having been committed by the gang. Most of them have served time in two or three countries, or will when the authorities of those countries get hold of them. They include Frenchmen, Italians, Spaniards, and Algerian Arabs. But, generally, to paraphrase an American poet who sang of the marauders of the Spanish Main, they are "the mildest mannered gentlemen who ever cut a throat or riddled a bank cashier."

Who are these criminals whose trial attracted to the Palas de Justice, Cleo de Merode, Gina Palerme, Emilienne d'Alencon and a host of other Parisian celebrities, who are left unmoved by the trial of Mme. Bessarabo and her daughter, who killed madam's husband and shipped the body in a trunk to the frontier?

A Wholesale Butcher.

First, of course, comes the chief of the gang. He is Rene Jean, proprietor of a wholesale butcher's establishment in the Paris slaughter house quarter known as La Villette. In the police record he is described as "the wholesale butcher Rene Jean, known as a serious business man in the slaughter house district." And Rene Jean looks the part. Looking at this young fellow twenty-five or so, with his smiling face, frank gaze, solid build and quiet bearing, it is difficult to imagine that he coldly plotted murders and robberies with the sole aim of making a fortune.

Rene Jean was a soldier during the war. He was wounded four times, cited in divisional orders, and received the croix de guerre. He is married and has two children. When the judge referred to his good record "now tarnished," Jean actually blushed and murmured:

"Yes, it's too bad."

By Jean's side in the prisoners' box were his thirteen accomplices. The bandits were dressed as every day clerks and seemed peaceable and home-loving citizens. There was Di Sena, an Italian. He was asked why he returned to Marseilles after having been expelled three times.

"What will you?" he retorted. "I wanted to work and I couldn't find anything to do in Naples, my home town."

Di Sena also served in the French ranks during the war. He was a "soldier of the legion," wounded several times, cited for conspicuous bravery and discharged with an excellent record. Of a similar type was Travail, a Marseillais. He also fought in the legion." Travail was arrested in South America and extradited but escaped and was rearrested in Spain.

Gently Excuses Self.

"You mustn't believe all the police tell you," was his comment when the judge questioned him about his record.

And another of the bandits, Tissiet, excused himself for a little matter of killing a man in a night restaurant by saying with a smile: "Quite so. I remember, it was New Year's eve."

The two Arabs admitted to membership in Rene Jean's club were Rasel Oued and Melka, whose military record bears this as a final mention, "Excellent worker. Splendid conduct."

Rene Jean's history surprised the police and the judicial authorities. He was always a hard worker and ambitious. This is what proved his undoing. In his confession he told how he had seen Mme. Dreyfus, wife of his employer when he was an assistant butcher, return from the market with as much as a hundred thousand francs in a satchel, the product of the morning's sales. Rene Jean decided that he also would be a wholesaler and planned to get hold of money to start in business by murdering Mme. Dreyfus.

This was accomplished with the aid of three members of the band. He obtained only ten thousand francs as his share of the plunder. Jean decided that he would have to try again. Thus started the career of crime

TWENTY-THREE—TWENTY-FOUR; GOOD TO LOOK UPON AND SINGLE

GEORGE B. COLLINS.

DONALD GALLAGHER.

Here are the two youngest members of the forty-second session of the Nebraska legislature. Collins is the younger by nearly a year, but Gallagher contends that the snug little mustache that George wears more than makes up the difference. Both are lawyers. Collins has an office in Omaha while Gallagher practices at O'Neill. The youthful member of the Omaha delegation is a democrat while the member from Holt is a republican. Regardless of his youth, he was made chairman of the house standing committee on labor. Collins was not in line for a chairmanship for the reason that he belongs to the minority party.

Collins was elected by something like fifty-five votes over his republican opponent, Sam Hoff. Mr. Hoff has been trying to figure the young attorney out of the office and still camps on the trail as a result of a shift in the recount in the Douglas county sheriff contest. But Collins sits tight. The time for the filing of a notice of contest has expired. And besides, Collins received a wider margin than either Ed Smith or Frank Belding, two of his delegation colleagues who made the grade by something like a score of votes each.

Gallagher graduated from the university college of law in 1921. He was deputy county attorney in Holt for one and one-half years. In the summer of 1921, when but twenty-two years old, he defended Della and Rolla DeHart who were later convicted of the murder of John Mize. A few months later he prosecuted Walter Holcomb for the murder of Tom Olson. Gallagher was attending Cornell university when this country entered the war. He left school to enlist in the aviation service of the navy.

Collins is a graduate of the Creighton law school. He also studied law at Georgetown. He was editor of the Georgetown law journal. He has practiced for more than two years and has an office of his own.

LETHAL GAS FOR INCURABLE

British Alderman Advocates Painless Death for Physically and Mentally Ruined.

LONDON.—(By Mail.)—Painless but compulsory death is the latest means advanced here to purge the population of this country of feeble-minded and incurable invalids.

Alderman Dr. Preston King, brother of Bishop King, advocated the lethal chamber for incurables in a speech at Bath.

Along with the painless eradication of the physically and mentally ruined, Dr. King took his place beside Dr Marie Stopes of the birth control league, by strongly urging the sterilization of those unfit to propagate the human race.

The painless execution of the unfit has attracted public attention before, both here and in America.

The lethal chamber still has many converts to win before it can be said to even threaten the united kingdom. It is significant, however that scarcely a week passes since the war but that some person advocates either sterilization or the lethal chamber as the means of bettering the human race.

Top Liners for Lincoln's Next Fistic Entertainment Place Names on Dotted Line

CURRY AND EVERETT SIGN FOR GO HERE

Bantam Flashes Will Meet in Ten Rounds—Curry Fought Springer Here Last Year and Got a Draw.

Lincoln will have one more opportunity of settling the much mooted question: does the capital city want boxing?

On January 26, Connie Curry, Sioux City flash and Stanley Everett, one of Tom Jones' boys, will meet in the windup of a card to be staged at the auditorium. And if this attraction fails to draw, then that's all there's going to be, there simply won't be any more, as far as the promoters of local boxing clubs are concerned.

On the last bill the Disabled American Veterans lost money. In order to help make back this deficit and also give Lincoln followers of fistiana a fair trial, the two other licensed clubs, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, decided to get behind the Disabled Veterans and see what could be done about it.

Hap Halligan, for the Legion, Tommy Keegan for the Veterans of Foreign Wars and John E. Casey of the Disabled Veterans have a card entirely in keeping with the main event. One contract is not yet back and Casey, who is serving as matchmaker, is holding off the announcement of the other participants until everything is signed and set.

Curry needs no introduction to Lincoln fans. He fought Springer here a year ago. The referee called it a draw.

Everett is the coming bantam champion, in the opinion of Tom Jones. And Tom has handled enough to know. He made Jess Willard, Ad Wolgast and Billy Papke what they were, and they all seemed satisfied.

Saving Boxing Game Again at Annual Meeting

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Delegates from many states, here for the annual convention of the national boxing association, will complete their yearly labor today of trying to save boxing.

Some one always is trying to save boxing. If the game is worth saving perhaps it wouldn't need so much incessant saving.

The national boxing association consists of a lot of gentlemen with fine theories and few practical ideas. Few of them have ever had on a glove and few of them have been tapped on the chin. They have not the boxers' viewpoint even if they have his interest at heart.

How totally they are in error about the innocents they have set out to save was shown in the first session when it was proposed that the funds to keep the association going could be provided if the boxers would give the association a percentage of all their purses.

While it has some high flying ideas, the association also has some sound ones. It refused to accept as junior welterweight champion one Pinkey Mitchell of Milwaukee who had been named as the title holder in a voting contest.

The association also thought well of the idea of discontinuing the practice of giving indefinite suspension to boxers.

GOLFERS ELECT DIRECTORS

Antelope Golf Club Have Spent $6,000 on Course in Last Year —Levy Green Fee.

D. J. Cravens, Roy Gilkeson, A. A. Tanner, H. W. Wood and Dr. C. A. Reynolds were chosen as directors of the Antelope Golf club at the annual meeting held in the commercial club annex, Monday night. The officers of the organization are to be selected from the new board of directors.

The report of the secretary and treasurer showed that approximately $6,000 has been spent on the Antelope golf course during the past year. This amount included work on the fairways, greens, terraces, hazards, bunkers and maintenance costs. The members suggested that during the coming year, many improvements be added. These improvements included the building of a wall near the number eight hole to keep the balls from falling into the creek, and the raising of number eight tee so that a clear view of the fairway could be had. It was also suggested that a steam roller be employed to pack down the fairways.

The big discussion of the meeting was embodied in the question of whether or not a fee should be assessed. A vote settled the problem by deciding that a fee of 25 cents would be levied during the week and a fee of 50 cents for Sundays and holidays.

"My 30 Years in Baseball"

By John J. McGraw

Manager New York "Giants"

ARTICLE 12

"Hit - 'Em - Where - They - Ain't" Keeler—The Greatest Team in Baseball History—Horseshoe Luck That Beat the Giants.

In the spring of 1894 we again arrived at New Orleans for training to find that Manager Hanlon had given us the needed cog to our machine—the key to the combination that made the Oriole the most famous of ball clubs During the off months he had put thru what I consider one of the greatest trades ever made in baseball. It was certainly the greatest ever made by Hanlon—and he made many.

Hanlon had traded Shindle and Treadway to Brooklyn for Willie Keeler and Dan Brouthers. As I remember, it was even swap. I mean Brooklyn thought it an even swap. As a matter of fact, Hanlon in a couple of trades like that laid the foundation for baseball fame and fortune. He was a wonderful trader.

A Heavy Hitter.

Dan Brouthers was one of the heaviest hitters in baseball and Keeler developed into one of the most scientific players the game has ever known. To this day one of Willie's remarks about hitting is a classic epigram of the diamond.

When asked the secret of batting the little fellow replied "Hit 'em where they aint." That was all.

In addition to Keeler and Brouthers Hanlon also had secured Bill Clarke, the catcher, and Heinie Reitz, the second baseman, from California.

With that group of talent Hanlon immediately formed a new line-up—the line-up that made the Orioles a historical institution. The batting order was: McGraw, 3b; Keeler, rf; Kelley, lf; Brouthers, 1b; Jennings, ss; Brodie, sf; Reitz, 2b; Robinson, Clarke, c; McMahon, Esper, Hoffer, Gleason, Pond and Clarkson, pitchers. Later Kid Gleason came from St. Louis and joined us. That, believe me, was a ball club

All Young Players.

This was a new combination, all young players, full of pep, fire and ambition. They surely could play ball. It was easily the best team of its day and time. I still hold the opinion that, from many angles, it was the best of all times. Team work was our middle name; everything had to give way to that.

The great thing about that team was that every one of us individually, felt that it belonged to us. Hanlon didn't have to scold or punish a player for failing to do his part. We attended to that ourselves. No player could come back to that bench after a bad play and expect to take it easy.

Another evidence of the greatness of that club, is that it is the only one that remains in spirit a team to this day. Every year we have a reunion. The players have looked after each other all these years. It is like an old college football team. You can remember that team as a unit. Others you can not. On other ball clubs the players have forgotten where its members are. On the Orioles we always know.

Dan Is A Watchman.

Dan Brouthers, for instance, is now watchman at the Polo Grounds. Dan is growing old, but he always will have a job. Keeler died recently at his home in Brooklyn. Every year, tho, we went to see him. He was badly missed at the reunion in Baltimore this fall.

The old Orioles thought of nothing but baseball. Our interest was to win. Salaries were secondary in consideration. We met every night and talked over our successes and failures. If it was a trip to a theater all of us went and sat together. Nowadays one or two ballplayers may go out together at night. In those days we all went together.

We knew that we had a great ball club and for that very reason I think we won a lot of ball games. We fought each other, of course, but such rows were the result of some player making a mistake we fought for the welfare of the team. Each player regarded himself as the manager of the other Hanlon had little to do other than to encourage us to keep on. He had built well.

Many Inside Plays.

During the training period we perfected many inside plays, such as the hit and run, the unexpected bunt, and so on. Keeler was a marvellous place hitter. I was not so bad at it myself. My long suit, tho, was my eye. I was a good waiter and rarely hit at a bad ball. For that reason I led the batting order. Keeler, on account of his place-hitting ability, followed me. I think, with all due modesty, that we worked the hit and run play more perfectly than I have seen since. If I reached first I would give the sign and Keeler, almost invariably, would hit the ball in the right place. Then we had Kelley and Brouthers, the long hitters, to clean up. If we slipped, there were Brodie and Robinson at the other end of the batting order to clean up after Jennings and Reitz had started something.

Word had reached other clubs of our new style of play—this trick stuff by kids, as they called it. All over the league the old-timers were disposed to kid us. I shall never forget our start that year.

We went up against the New York Giants, managed by John Montgomery Ward, in a four game series. They had trained at Charleston and had come direct to Baltimore from the camp to start the season. The Giants had been touted as sure pennant winners. They had a staff of famous pitchers—Amos Rusie, Jouett Meekin, Dad Clarke and Hyler Westervelt.

Beat Giants Four Straight.

All baseball was astounded by our feat of winning four straight games from the famous Giants. Right off the reel, in the first game, Willie Keeler and I stood them on their heads by pulling the hit and run play.

They thought it merely a bit of luck that we should happen to hit the ball thru a hole just left by the baseman going to cover the bag. Not for a moment would they believe such a play was prearranged.

"Just a lot of horseshoe luck," said John Ward, dumbfounded at our victory.

Not until we had won four games by these so-called tricks did Ward grasp the system of team work and new plays that had been sprung on him. He sincerely believed them to have been accidents. Later he awoke and acknowledged that we really had pulled something new in baseball.

What we did to his four star pitchers was a-plenty. It happened to be my luck to win the last game by a hit in the ninth inning.

That one series made the Orioles. Seeing that our stuff had worked, we were full of confidence and cockiness. Jennings, Keeler, Kelley, Robinson and myself organized ourselves into a sort of committee. We were scheming all the time for a new stunt to pull on our opponents. We talked, lived and dreamed baseball. That was the secret of our success. Woe betide the player who failed us! His life on the bench was not a pleasant one. He never forgot the roasting and never failed to deliver one if somebody else failed.

Last fall I heard much of the sensational invasions of both the Giants and the Yanks in the west. Well, that year the Orioles made an invasion that was even a greater sensation. We started on the last western trip a half game in the lead. We finished four games ahead, having won eighteen straight games and twenty-four out of the last twenty-five. But for an accident to Wilbert Robinson, who slipped in the mud while about to make a play, we would have won the whole twenty-five.

Our best work was at Pittsburgh where we gave the prettiest exhibition of place hitting that I ever hope to see. The lefthanders poked the ball into left field and the right handers poked it into right, time and time again. The Pirates were completely confused and dazed. They had never seen anything like that before—neither had we.

That fall we lost the Temple cup series to the Giants but Jennings and I got back to St. Bonaventure as heroes. We were champions. It was a royal reception. But, speaking of receptions—well, tomorrow.

"GOOD CHRISTIAN IS GOOD FIGHTER," SAYS PASTOR, TEACHING GIRLS TO BOX

CHICAGO.—"Sin results from temptation," said the Rev. Eleazer Dawe, pastor of the Sheridan Road Methodist church. "No man is going to be tempted to get 'fresh' with a girl if he knows she packs a healthy wallop in each fist."

So Rev. Mr. Dawe hired D. Logan Loughborough, former football player and veteran of the Boer war, the boxer rebellion and the Spanish-American war to teach Sunday school girls to box, for their own protection and safety.

BROWNING WIDENS LEAD IN STANDINGS

Missouri Basketball Captain Now Has 78 Points—All Eyes Turned Toward the Kansas-Missouri Game at Columbia.

"Bun" Browning, brilliant forward and captain of the University of Missouri basketball team, lengthened his stride and pulled away to an even more comfortable lead in the individual standing of the Missouri valley conference, during the past week. With twenty-eight field goals and twenty free throws, Browning leads the valley in individual scoring with seventy-eight points.

Two Kansas players scored consistently during the week and fell in behind Browning in the standing. Bowman of Kansas, who was in fourth position last week with twelve points, forged ahead and landed in second place with forty-seven points when the week ended. Ackerman, another Jayhawker, who was in a tie for thirteenth place last week, jumped into third place with forty points. Ackerman and Browning scored the same number of points during the week but the Kansas man played in one more game than the Missouri captain.

Missouri Has Edge.

It is generally conceded around the valley circuit that Missouri and Kansas will be on top of the heap when the conference season ends. However, early season comparisons indicate that Missouri has an edge over Kansas in offense. In four games the Tigers have scored 169 points while the Kansas team has scored only 144 points in five games. The two squads have met practically the same class of opponents. Drake and Grinnell have been met by both Kansas and Missouri. Kansas played Nebraska and Ames, two fairly strong teams, while Missouri met the Kansas Aggies and Grinnell.

A line on the final standing of the two rivals will be available this week when the Tigers and Jayhawkers clash at Columbia Tuesday night. The standings including games played January 13:

CHANCE TO REPEAT SCHISSLER TACTICS

Nebraska Basketball Squad Offers Material for "Pony" and Big Team—Chick Hartley Will Report in Week.

By John Bentley.

Do you remember the 1919 and 1920 basketball teams at Nebraska? Paul Schissler was coaching them at that time and the possibility of using the tactics which spelled success for those teams presents itself again this year. Schissler had what was known as a "pony" team and another five, much heavier.

The pony team was the offensive hope while the heavier quintet was used primarily for defense and to tire the opponents. An opposing team, becoming accustomed to the slower movements of the heavier men, was generally swept off its feet when the lighter team took the floor.

"Pony" and "Bruisers."

After the second semester opens, taking for granted the entire squad, is eligible, which may or may not be the case, here are the teams which could perform after the manner of the 1919-20 teams:

| "Pony" team— | | —Heavier team |
|---|---|---|
| Usher | f | Goodson |
| Klopser | f | Holland |
| M. Tipton | c | Warren (C) |
| Scott | g | Vols |
| Riddlesbarger | g | Wymes |

The logical substitutes, who would in all probability cause some changes in these lineups provided this plan was given a trial, are Hoy, forward and Summers, guard, for the lighter quintet with Carman and P. Tipton, forwards and Chick Hartley guard, for the heavier team.

Faster This Year.

As a matter of fact, the "pony" team this year is even faster than that bunch of 1920 whirlwinds. Tony Smith and Patty were the forwards in 1920, Beacon, center; Newman and Bailey guards. The heavier five was composed of Warren, present captain and Carman, forwards; Monte Munn, center; Munger and Hartley, guards.

Chick Hartley, captain of last season's football team and a cage veteran also, is reporting as soon as examinations are over.

Chick may not make the team. But he is coming back with the idea that he may help instill the old fight. Another mark in Chick's merit column!

Drake opens the season here Thursday evening. Just what men Coaches Frank and Munn will place against the Iowans is a matter of conjecture. The Husker squad has been working hard for the past week during which time there have been no Valley games. Some of the sour owls who have been hoping that Nebraska has no basketball team this season may sustain a severe shock when they see the team in action in the opener.

Open With Drake Here.

If they go like they did Monday night in practice, there is little question about the shock—but it will be a pleasant one. Oklahoma is here Saturday night. Nebraska should win both these games and likewise there can be no legitimate excuse offered in case the Huskers fail to place in the Valley race this season. The material is unquestionably there.

Usher, who turned an ankle in the Kansas game, was out again Monday night.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—(United Press) "Troubles, troubles, all I has is troubles," Battling Siki, titleless champion of Europe, might be chanting today.

GOVERNOR REPORTS WORK DUPLICATED

Will Call Lawmakers' Attention to Normal Training in High Schools, Normal and University.

Governor Bryan said Tuesday he would lay before the legislature without comment a statement of facts which will show that the law provides for a two year course in normal training in high schools, also that the four state normal schools provide for a four year course and the university of Nebraska also has a department in normal training.

The governor will report in addition that the department of public welfare and the university extension are both engaged in child welfare work. Governor Bryan said most states have this work under one head.

CITY GAS IS ABOVE THE LEGAL AVERAGE

So Shows Report of Inspector Thomas—573.2 B. T. U.'s Is the Average for 1922.

The illuminating gas furnished to the city of Lincoln Gas & Electric Light company during the year of 1922 averaged much above the legal requirement, which is 550 B. T. U's. according to a bulletin issued by Dr. Chauncey Chapman, superintendent of public health. This bulletin consists mainly of the report of city gas inspector, W. O. Thomas. Mr. Thomas says that the quality of the gas and the service furnished by the gas company was uniformly good during the year.

Not a single request for meter testing was made to the office in the entire year. The last meter tested was on March 7, 1921. Two trivial complaints as to service were filed, and these were found to be due to faulty adjustment of the burners. In a city of nearly 60,000 people this is a remarkably satisfactory record and is probably without a parallel in any city of this size in the United States, the report continues.

Mr. Thomas says further, "It is impossible to speak too highly of the unfailing courtesy of the management and employes of the Lincoln Gas & Electric Light company in all matters connected with the gas supply and service. I am glad to render this valedictory tribute to the retiring management, and I trust that the new owners of the Lincoln Gas & Electric Light company will live up to the high ideals of their predecessors."

In August 1920 the city council passed an ordinance reducing the legal requirement of B. T. U's. from 625 to 550.

SUPREME COURT'S SYLLABI

Opinions filed January 16, 1923:

Cunningham v Scott. Appeal, Kimball. Reversed and remanded. Opinion by Rose J.

1. In replevin for wheat in a bin, proof of the quantity taken under the writ as shown by the testimony of disinterested witnesses who measured it and by the actual weights when weighed at elevators is not overthrown by the mere opinion of defendants who base thei restimate of quantity on truck-loads and tne number of bushels in each without accurate knowledge or admissible data.

2. Where the evidence shows that a finding of fact on a material issue is clearly wrong, it may be set aside on appeal.

3. Where memoranda consisting of many items are used by a witness to refresh his memory in testifying on a material issue, the failure, on motion to strike out the testimony thus adduced may amount to prejudicial error, if it is based on a book of original entries in possession of the witness and available but not produced.

4. The failure, upon request, to submit to the jury a material issue of fact conforming to plaintiff's theory of the case as shown by the pleadings and the proofs may constitute error requiring the reversal of a judgment in favor of defendant.

Pester v Holmes. Appeal, Valley. Opinion affirmed. Opinion by Redick, district judge.

1. "A township organized under the township organization act in this state is not liable to persons injured by reason of defects in the public highways within the limits of such township," Wilson v Ulysses township, 72 Neb. 807.

2. The exemption of the township from liability extends to its officers, agents and servants in the prosecution of work upon the highway.

3. A liability for negligence presupposes the existence of a duty from a breach of which injury results.

4. A servant is not liable to a third person for negligence of the master in failing to perform a duty placed by law upon the master, but only for his own negligence in failing to perform a duty owing by the servant to such third person.

Lower v. State. Error, Saunders, affirmed Opinion by Dean, J.

1. The word "actions" as used in the general saving clause act, section 3097, Comp. St. 1922, includes both civil and criminal proceedings.

2. It will not be presumed that the legislature, in the repeal of a criminal statute, intended thereby, either directly or indirectly, to cause the dismissal of prosecutions pending and undetermined against persons charged with the commission of criminal offenses.

3. It will not be presumed that the legislature intended to bestow a legislative pardon, by the repeal of a criminal statute, upon persons found guilty of a felony, but who perhaps by some mishap or by some error in the proceedings, have not yet been lawfully sentenced.

4. When a defendant is charged with embezzling money under section 8658, Rev. St. 1913, or under section 3947, Comp. St. 1922, it is not necessary for the jury to fix in the verdict the value o fthe money embezzled. Courts will take judicial notice of the worth of United States money.

5. The county attorney requested the court to appoint counsel to assist in the trial of a case charging a felony. Pursuant to such request the court appointed two assistants, attorneys general for that purpose. Held, that such appointment was without error.

6. The evidence examined, and held that the verdict is amply supported thereby.

Billings v. State. Error, Antelope. Affirmed. Opinion by Day, J.

1. Where articles or information are offered in evidence, which are pertinent to the issue, the court will not exclude them because they may have been obtained in an irregular or illegal manner.

2. Where an officer acting under a search warrant seizes property beyond the scope and terms of the writ, such act under certain circumstances is a violation of section 7 article 1 of our constitution, but the mere fact that the constitutional right of search and seizure has been violated does not militate against receiving in evidence, against the party from whose possession they were obtained, the articles so seized and the information so procured.

3. The fourth amendment to the constitution of the United States relating to searches and seizures only applies to the federal government and its [illegible]

4. [illegible] of the supreme court of the United States construing the fourth amendment to the federal constitution are not controlling [illegible] on this [illegible] in the construction of section 7 article 1 of our constitution.

ON TRAIL OF SCHOELLKOPF GEMS

Millionaire Sumoned to Indianapolis for Jewels.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 16.—Charles P. Hugo Schoellkopf, millionaire whose wife was robbed of $500,000 worth of jewels at a New Year's eve party in New York, was reported en route to Indianapolis today to deal with the crooks who claimed to have the gems.

The offer to return the jewelry on payment of "$100,000 and expenses" was reported made to Schoellkopf, by a New York attorney acting in behalf of an Indianapolis law firm. The offer was understood to have contained the requirement that there would be no prosecution.

Police here believe Schoellkopf would deal with the Indianapolis representative under an assumed name in order to protect the thieves. He has not communicated with Indianapolis authorities.

STATE INSPECTORS DOING DOUBLE DUTY

Records of Department of Agriculture Show Many Employes Do Various Inspections on One Trip.

Acting Secretary W. J. Mayer of the department of agriculture is receiving many requests for information in regard to the number of inspectors employed by his department. Many members of the legislature have the impression that an army of inspectors is employed and that no one inspector does more than one kind of inspecting and thus there is a trail of inspectors arriving and departing daily from every town in the state.

The records of his department show eleven inspectors in the food, drug and dairy bureau who make sixteen different kinds of inspections, including food, drug, oils, hotels, bakeries, meat markets, flour and feed.

There are five dairy inspectors who confine their activities purely to dairy products in creameries and cream-receiving stations, condensing plants and ice cream factories, and Babcock cream test examinations. Considerable special training is required to fit these inspectors for their work.

There are six inspectors of weights and measures whose work is confined to covering the entire state in the work of testing weights and measures. There are eight different sorts of inspection in this branch of work.

Potato inspectors are numerous, but they are local men living at potato-producing or shipping railway stations. Eighty-six have been at work inspecting potatoes. More than 3,200 carloads were inspected during the fiscal year. The fee is $4 a car, half of this fee going to the inspector and half to the state.

Game wardens now on duty number only two. In the summer eight are employed.

In the bureau of animal industry eighteen veterinarians are employed at the peak load. These care for the work in eradication of tuberculosis in cattle, dairy testing of cattle, special investigations, sanitation and disinfecting, exports and imports of livestock, scabies eradication, hog cholera and miscellaneous inspections.

Every department of inspection work pays expenses except the weights and measures.

CONSIDER POINCARE DEMAND

Commission Meets on Order That Delivery Failures Be Declared Violation of Versailles.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The reparations commission met today upon Premier Poincare's demand that Germany's failure to make deliveries of coal, cattle and rolling stock be declared a violation of the Versailles treaty.

American Observer Boyden presented a memorandum outlining generally the United States' attitude on reparations: i. e., that Germany's capacity for payment should be re-examined.

Discussion of the memorandum was put over until Friday. Boyden's views are similar to those of Sir John Bradbury, British member.

The commission voted with Poincare that Germany had defaulted in cattle and coal payments. The British representative abstained from voting.

Brains, Not Brawn, Make Great Basketball Players—Best Means of Advancing Ball Is by Short Passing—When to Use Dribble.

NO. 2—PLAYING THE OFFENSE.

By Nat Holman.

(World's Leading Player and Author of "Scientific Basketball.")

In writing of individuals, the temptation is always to make comparisons Is this man better than that one? What would the other have done on a stronger team? Regardless of scores at the finish of a game, Dr. Lou Sugarman, Johnny Beckman, and Barney Sedran are regarded great offensive players. They are wonderful and exceptionally fast men. They have physical power, stamina, good judgment and foresight—characteristics which make good forwards. Brains not brawn, make them superior to other offensive players.

On the offensive, a good player will not lose possession of the ball by taking long shots. If his team is behind by five to seven points and these is but a short time to play, then a long try is permissable. If the player with the ball is set and not too far back, let him shoot and follow the ball up after the shot. The trouble with many teams on the offense is that they have one or two good points scorers on the team and they expect them to do all the scoring. These men naturally will shoot every opportunity they have, irrespective of what their angle is or the distance they are away from the basket. If a man cannot get his shots directly under the basket let him throw from the territory around the foul line.

Hard to Follow Up.

A long shot is hard to follow up, altho it is the duty of the men nearest to the basket to follow the shot. On the other hand, shots taken around the foul line can be followed up with better results. If a man has the ball on the offensive and his opponent charges him, he ought not to be satisfied with having a "held" ball called. Let him swing his body around, clinging to the ball in the mean time. If he can manage temporarily to retain possession of the ball by turning his body away from his opponent, he should then pass it back to one of his mates and start the play over again.

Francis P. Neehan, who jumped centre for the Germantown Team of the Eastern league, used to work this play to perfection. Meechan 6 feet, 4 inches tall and was a wonderful help to a team, not only in giving them possession of the ball at the centre play but in assisting them on the offense under the basket with this play. Meehan would hurry his back to his own basket. When he was in this position, his mates would make a high loop pass to him. He would then stoop forward, both arms stretched forward and outward and pass to his mates as they would cut in to the basket. If a team has a tall man jumping centre for them, let them try this play on the offense.

Take Shot Himself.

Another added feature about the play was that if Meehan wasn't able to "feed" any of his men cutting in for the basket, as would be the case when his mates were covered, he would swing around for the basket take one dribble and shoot.

Dribbling is often overdone. Just as soon as some players get hold of the ball they start down the floor with a dribble. Dribbling should be used as a means of advancing the ball down the field as a substitute for passing. The first and best means of advancing the ball down the floor is by short passing.

If a man with the ball finds that his opposing guard is waiting for him under his basket and he is somewhere in and around the centre of the court, let him start off on a dribble if none of his mates are in front of him. During the course of this dribble, he should be ever ready to come to a halt and feed one of his mates who may be coming down the floor at a fast pace. If he should overlook his mate by continuing the dribble the chances are that he will lose an opportunity to score a basket. and, secondly, he is apt to cause ill-feeling among his mates, because he is stressing individual playing instead of teamwork.

Use Dribble Here.

Whenever a team is playing on a long court, it is advisable to bring the ball up the field on a dribble instead of by passing. A good deal of strength will be used up by working the ball up the field, by passing and shifting from one side of the court to another. On the other hand, if one of the men has possession of the ball under his opponent's basket, one man should stay back to throw the ball in from the outside, and another to take the throw. In the mean time, the other three should hurry up the field, so that they can get in and around the foul line and cross from side to side.

The man that receives the pass from the outside should start down the floor on a dribble at once, provided he is not covered. Very seldom will he be covered because his man will be waiting for him to come down the floor somewhere in the backfield. Then when he gets within reasonable distance he should make a pass to one of his men and cut in at the same time. If he is going fast and the men on the team return the pass to him nine times out of ten he will either make the basket or he will be fouled by one of the opposing guards.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

R. T. VanBrunt met with an accident while stepping from the F. E and M. V. passenger train, breaking one thumb and spraining the other.

The Lincoln stock yards showed, in a neat pamphlet issued, that business had been good in 1897. During the year the company received 43,000 more cattle, 8,249 more hogs, 87,867 more sheep and 765 more horses than in 1896.

The Cuban relief committee signified that they would be glad to accept Nebraska products, including shelled corn.

The full sermons of Dr. Hindman at the First Presbyterian and Rev. Edmund Erb at St. Mark's Lutheran church were printed, including the closing prayers.

The annual meeting of the Nebraska territorial pioneers was held in the university chapel. All who came to or were born in Nebraska prior to March 1, 1867, were eligible to membership. Robert W. Furnas was president and William R. Bowen, secretary.

The saloons were closed more securely for the day than they had been for many months on Sunday. A few drunks were seen on the street, but it was thought that considering the usual number the city was in pretty good shape for the day.

TO FERRET AS THEY PLEASE

COMMITTEE NAMED TO CHECK UP ON UNIVERSITY.

Members of House Finance Group Explain That They Too Can Get What They Want When They Want It.

Five members of the lower house constituting a committee of investigation of university expenditures with power to go as far as they like, were named by Speaker Mathers Tuesday noon by virtue of a resolution introduced by Representative Auten and amended by J. Reid Green. Three of the five investigators are democrats and four are farmers. James Auten of Albion, democrat and farmer, is chairman. His colleagues on the probe list: Donald Gallagher, republican, O'Neill, lawyer, Daniel Garber, Red Cloud, farmer and republican; Theo Osterman, Central City, farmer and democratic floor leader; C. L. Yochum, Talmage, democrat and farmer.

Members of the house finance committee made it clear that they too can get what they want when they want it in way of knowing what the university spends and why. The original resolution presented by Mr. Auten would require departmental heads of the university to submit a report of all expenditures of the past two years.

Representative Baldridge of Omaha explained that there are some fifty university departments, that there are issued probably 1,000 vouchers each month and that the Auten provision would mean submission of 24,000 vouchers, each carrying a number of items. Representative Gallagher sought to amend the Auten resolution by providing for a working arrangement between the special committee and the house finance committee. Members of the finance group had no taste for this sort of thing. J. Reid Green proposed that the special committee work independently, that university departmental heads furnish such detailed information on or before February 1 as the committee may desire and that the investigators report to the house proper not later than February 7. This plan met with general approval.

Under the Green amendment, there are no strings on the committee. Power is given that group to ask for what it wans. Representative Keifer called attention to appendix A of the budget prepared by Secretary of Finance Bross. Mr. Keifer said that some members criticise the appendix because it is too complicated.

"If we can't understand these general figures, why bother with 24,000 vouchers?" he asked.

Chairman Grant Mears of the finance committee said that his group has no desire to jump at conclusions. Economy is the watchword and his committee recognizes a duty of thoroly investigating all expenditures.

The house voted to call Mr. Bross in for an explanation of the various tables contained in appendix A and dealing with university expenditures. But Mr. Bross is now a private citizen. He is willing to assist Governor Bryan whenever possible. But he could not be located at 11 a. m. Tuesday. The house remained at ease and in wait for thirty minutes and then adjourned. The former finance head will be invited to appear during the Wednesday morning session.

The resolution as adopted:

> "Resolved that the heads of the various departments of the university be requested to submit to a committee to be appointed by the speaker, such typewritten reports of expenditures as may be requested by the committee for the past two years. These reports to be delivered to the committee chairman by the heads of the several departments not later than February 1. Said committee to report not later than February 7."

The recapitulation table dealing with university appropriations, shows a total estimated expenditure for the present biennium of $5,710,545.34 and a request from the university expending agencies for $7,221,225.66 for the next biennium, an increase of $1,150,680.32. Governor McKelvie recommends a flat appropriation of $6,360,725.66.

Governor Bryan is still investigating the budget for the purpose of recommending changes in the items.

"A budget, as I understand it," said Governor Bryan; "should be a simplified form of accounts that can be easily understood by laymen."

"No, I have not asked Mr. Bross to explain the budget to me," said the governor, "but I asked him to remain at his post in charge of the finance department where he would be available for explanations of his department and the budget."

Mr. Bross explained when he quit January 4 that he did not care to accept the governor's request to stay an indefinite period but that he had offered his services free to the new governor for a period of fifteen days.

Now that Mr. Bross is out of the service of the state the governor takes the position that he does not care to ask for the assistance of outsiders.

DEMOCRATS TO HOLD CAUCUS

DESIRED TO GET SOLIDLY BEHIND ADMINISTRATION.

Minority in House to Meet Behind Closed Doors Tuesday Evening to Decide on Unity of Action.

Representative Orr of Burt, head of the democratic caucus, has issued a call for a meeting of house members at the Lindell hotel at 7:30 Tuesday evening.

Mr. Orr says the purpose is to enable the democratic members to get better acquainted, to give the old heads a chance to advise the new heads and to arrive at a better understanding.

The real purpose, it is claimed by the politicians, is to secure unity of action behind what Governor Bryan proposes to do with respect to the budget. The gossip at the state house is that the governor will slash all of the appropriations, regardless of whether the money is needed or not and then put it up to the republican legislature to increase them to proper proportions.

In this way, republican leaders point out, the administration will be able to say to taxpayers that it tried its best, but the republicans would not allow it to cut expenses.

In order to make it a party matter, the caucus is to be held to line up democrats behind this proposition, so that responsibility for appropriations will rest entirely on republican shoulders. There are some democrats interested in appropriations for state institutions located in their home towns, who are not now in favor of this scheme.

ROTARIANS HEAR M'KELVIE

Ex-Governor Discusses Popular Government and the Decay of Patriotism.

Samuel R. McKelvie told the Lincoln Rotarians that what the American people need is a new birth of patriotism. The ex-governor by request, repeated a speech he made several weeks ago in New York before a society commemorating the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. The speaker briefly traced the history of the American government from its birth to the preesnt time. It was his firm conviction that the people are departing from the precepts and the faith of the fathers of the republic.

He believed that next to the Bible the constitution of the United States was the most inspired of God. He thought that if a better understanding was had of the purposes of the founders of the nation there would be less hesitation in laying hands on the constitution.

It made him sick at heart when he heard the modern day appeal to prejudice and class consciousness. There are now more laws and less respect for them. A new baptism of patriotism, work, a deeper appreciation of responsibility as citizens and Americans were remedies suggested.

He declared that the heart of popular government is respect, obedience and enforcement of the laws. Another peril to popular government was the poor assimulation of so many foreigners, whose appreciation and understanding of the blessings of democracy were not such as to make the good citizens and patriots.

MARTIN BACK TO LINCOLN

Former Lumber Dealer Returns From Norfolk as Manager of Nebraska Material Company.

E. S. Martin, who will come from Norfolk next month to be general manager for the Nebraska Material company, will not come to Lincoln as a stranger, having been connected with the Dierks Lumber company here up to twelve years ago. He was elected Tuesday morning at the annual meeting of stockholders and directors, to succeed C. R. Martin, who has been trying for some months to be relieved of this position so as to give all his time to the business of Martin, Cole & Buckley.

The same directors and officers were elected for 1923. They are:

Morris Friend, president.
Victor W. Krause, vice president.
Victor E. Friend, secretary.
Mrs. N. M. Krause, C. A. Richey, J. N. Girard, A. R. Talbott and T. S. Allen, directors

The financial report showed a satisfactory increase over the business of the year before, and good business for 1923 was forecast.

FIRE DESTROYS THE TOP FLOOR OF HOUSE

Tenants Are Forced to Vacate Apartments Damaged by Flames and Water—Loss Aggregates $6,000.

Fire destroyed the upper story of the two-story Maples apartment house, 1443-5-7-9 D street, at 11 a. m. Tuesday. The damage to building and contents exceeds $6,000. William H. Smith is owner of the house and occupies an apartment on the first floor. C. K. Kreigh and S. B. Mahery occupy the two apartments on the second floor. Nearly all of their belongings were destroyed.

A blaze on the roof was discovered by a neighbor across the street at 11 a. m. An alarm was turned in and when firemen arrived the flames had made considerable headway. The blaze had eaten its way down into the two second-story apartments.

The loss was entirely covered by insurance. In the apartments of Mr. Smith and H. C. Noll on the first floor the contents were damaged by water. It will be necessary for the tenants to vacate the building. The part of the building that was not destroyed is badly water-soaked, according to the tenants, and much of the plaster has fallen from the ceilings.

It is the opinion of Fire Chief Hansen and Assistant Chief Donnelly that the blaze was caused by sparks from the chimney.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 16.—Passage of joint resolution by the state legislature to inform congress that the people of New Jersey favor amendment of the Volstead act so as to permit use of light wines and beer, was recommended by Governor George S. Silzer in his inaugural address here today.

DEFICIT IN FAIR REPORT

MONEY SPENT FOR IMPROVEMENTS AND MAINTENANCE.

Secretary Danielson's Showing for the Board of Agriculture Indicates Need of Legislative Assistance.

Secretary Danielson of the state board of agriculture, in his annual report read to the board Tuesday afternoon, deal at length with the agricultural situation in the state. this history and work of the state board from its beginning, and the returns for effort directed along agricultural lines He finds the following contributing causes to the abnormal relationship of farm prices to the prices of other things:

Over production.

Maintenance of industrial wages at war time levels.

Economic depression and depreciated currency in Europe.

Interference with efficient functioning of necessary industries.

Unreasonably high costs of distribution of some farm produce.

These topics are discussed in the report. The effect of agricultural depression is shown on fairs.

Discussing the 1922 state fair Mr. Danielson says:

"Our financial report for the past year will show a deficit of $9,980 95. The actual fair receipts for the year were $131,576.38 and the cash balance on hand the first of the year was $27,126 97 making total receipts of $158,703.35. Our fair expenses were $130,166 34, which should leave us a cash balance of $28,537.01 at the close of the year. Instead of this cash balance we find a deficit of $9,980.95 This is caused by taking from our treasury $32,444.61 for maintenance of the grounds and $6,114.40 for permanent improvements, making a total for these two items of $37,559.01.

"Your board is doing with this deficit, due to the same conditions, as they have done with those of previous years, namely, borrowing money and giving their signatures in the name of the board. Never has the board appeared before a legislature and asked for a reimbursement when we were laboring with a depleted treasury. It is not our intention to make any request for a reimbursement now.

"In order to eliminate any such occurences in the future and remove the necessity for the men constituting your executive board to financially carry the maintenance and improvement of state property, we are asking the state—thru the legislature—to appropriate a sufficient sum to properly maintain its property and take care of the ever increasing minor improvements that must be added from year to year to take care of the natural growth of this institution.

"We are hopeful that the state fair treasury will be relieved of this drain for maintenance and the present legislature will make sufficient appropriation to properly care for this state property.

"The boys and girls of Nebraska are deeply interested in their club work. A place to exhibit their products is one of the vital necessities, if the state fair is to continue as an incentive to this work. Without such a building both the fair and the club work will suffer.

"We are in dire need of an administration building of adequate size to properly house all the executive departments of the fair.

"I speak of these two buildings at this time for the reason that they are the ones which I think should be given first consideration in the future building plans.

"During the past year the west bleachers were rebuilt. The low places on the grounds north of the livestock coliseum, north of the auditorium and north and west of the boys' camp were filled. This practically fills all the remaining bed of the old Antelope Creek inside the fair grounds. Cement walks were laid around the Womans' and Children's building, the street north of the horse barns filled, cindered and graded. In fact, nearly every street on the grounds was given a covering of cinders previous to the opening of the fair and, due to these cindered streets, we were not buried in a cloud of dust all during the period of the fair.

"I have repeatedly called to your attention the lack of proper camping ground facilities. Thru the lack of such grounds, we are denying to many families the privilege of staying with us thru the week or, at least, the best part of fair week.

"In closing, let me express my appreciation—and that of the board—for the splendid cooperation which has existed thru the trying and arduous times of the past two years.' '

SOUVENIR FOR VETERANS

Pupils of Bird School of Des Moines Compile Booklet for Members of the Grand Army.

Among the packages left on the desk of Adj. Harmon Bross in the state house was one which upon being opened disclosed a beautiful souvenir of the late national G. A. R. encampment at Des Moines.

During the encampment, a number of the veterans visited different public schools and made addresses to the teachers and pupils. One of these, the Bird school, manifested a peculiar interest in these patriotic occasions and wished in some way to testify their appreciation of these visits and of the occasion. The teachers regretted that no register had been kept of the visitors and after some days of consultation and planning the method was adopted of asking assistent adjutant generals of each state to furnish a list of the names of the various visitors from their state. Nebraska was allotted 100 names and the list completed at the adjutant's office.

It contains the names of all department officers, all delegates, all past department commanders and a long list of prominent comrades who are called upon ever and anon to make addresses to public schools and community gatherings The souvenir consists of a book prepared by the pupils of Bird school and displays remarkable skill, and patience in the execution. It is beautifully bound and everyone of its pages has some unique tribute to the comrade whose name is on the title page.

The one to the Nebraska boys says: "To Harmon Bross who is still a "Boy in Blue." This book is gratefully dedicated by, Bird school, Des Moines, Iowa."

On the next page in a clear eligible but child's hand writing, is the record of the visit and the appreciation of the Bird school. Then follows an account of the presentation of flowers to the comrades and a tribute to the flag. One remarkable thing about the souvenir is that everyone has the full text of the bulletins issued by the board of education during the assembly. Then there are clippings from the papers of various events during the three days.

NEW YORK—Fingerprints on a gun stock—the same gun which killed Capt. Pettit, well known in Long Island sporting circles, was killed with one of his own shotguns The fact that he was so thoro a gunning enthusiast may have resulted in revealing his sl [illegible] and stock of the gun with vaseline to prevent rust, and on this covering of grease the fingerprints were found.

A woman of striking appearance even today, five feet six inches tall and crowned with abundant auburn hair, "Billie" Wells is a well known figu re to patrons of the Massapequa inn at Freeport, L. I., owned by Pettit, where she lived with him.

"FIRST LOVE"

The Story of a Childhood Romance that Struggled Against the Temptations of the New York Business World.

(Copyright.)

By Caroline Crawford

Jessie Jackson and Peter Manton as childhood sweethearts lived in adjoining apartment houses, they played together upon the city streets but did not realize how deep was their love until they entered high school together Their families considered it "puppy love," but when Jessie and Peter enter the business world they still continue to be lovers. Others come into their lives and many instances arise which might have parted them Begin this story today and see if a deep love, begun in childhood days, can survive tempations to thwart it.

The Charm of an Older Man.

As long as Jessie Jackson lived she declared she would never forget that first formal dance with Clyde Nelson Every match-making mother had her eye upon him but Nelson was all eyes for Jessie. Gray haired matrons bowed and scraped before him while gay debutantes flirted over their fans and waited breathlessly for him to ask for the next dance. But when Clyde Nelson was not dancing with his new found high school bud he was sitting in the conservatory with her telling her of his life, his plans for the future and what she meant to him.

"I always knew I'd find you," he whispered as they sat out one dance in the cool, refreshing conservatory. Palms and ferns and large vases filled with fresh cut flowers were all about them. The soft, entrancing perfumes of mingled flowers and plants met Jessie's nostrils as the light strains of an enchanting fox trot floated thru the glass doors to them.

"Isn't it strange that I who have waited so long, who have travelled all over the continent, should know you were the maid of my dreams?" softly asked Clyde Nelson. He was a tall, willowy man with deep, penetrating eyes. Tho his figure was still boyish there was a streak of gray in his jet black hair. He was a man of power, of position, a sophisticated man of the world and he loved her—silly little Jessie Jackson!

That is what Jessie thought as she listened to this great handsome man talking to her. Several times she tried to compare him to Peter, but it all seemed so impossible. It was like trying to compare a kitten with a tiger. Clyde Nelson was a man of the world. He could talk by a mere jesture of his hand. A look meant hundreds of words Peter Manton was an awkward blushing school boy. And yet—

There in that great conservatory with all the spread and pomp, midst the perfume of flowers and the light, soft music with love words, whispered into her ear which many a society woman of thirty would have envied. Jessie Jackson bit her lip and thought of Peter—her own old Peterkins.

"Jessie, dear, don't you believe in love at first sight, don't you believe certain people were made for each other, that you and I, dear, might realize that at once?"

"But my father—what would my father say if he knew you talked to me this way?" asked Jessie, half innocently and half in order to keep from answering his question.

Your father knows I am in quest of your hand, dear," reassured the older man as he bent over her until his lips almost touched hers.

Jessie was not used to the mature man, the man of the world who makes love upon a third or fourth meeting when he really intends matrimony. She was not sure of herself. She realized the charm of the older man. She appreciated the intensity of his nature, the irresistible appeal of the man who has travelled. She must not encourage this man, she must not let him go to her father saying she cared for him. She must keep free for Peter. She must go to business, have a career, go in for welfare work or do anything to give Peter a chance to make his way and win her.

"Let's dance!" she suddenly exclaimed, breaking into one of Clyde Nelson's declarations.

"Oh, you foxy little high school girls," he laughed. "It's really lots more fun to make love to you than it is to the too encouraging society matrons."

MOTHER'S INSTINCT TRIUMPHED

Frenchwoman Detected Imposter Who Posed as Lost Son.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—A mother's unfailing instinct has unmasked an extraordinary imposture which in some ways resembles the world-famous Kimmel case of Michigan

About a month ago a man claiming to be Gabriel Teyssie, who was killed in the war six years ago, came to the Teyssie home near Agen and announced that he was the long missing son He told a romantic story of being captured by the Germans and imprisoned afterward for treason, and held in solitary confinement until recently when he escaped and walked all the way from Berlin. The man bore a striking resemblance to the missing man.

At first the father, mother and one of the brothers refused to believe it was their son and brother, but when the imposter related minute incidents of his boyhood he was accepted. He even had a curious impediment of speech like the missing man.

Upon the demand of the mother, the man was arrested and charged with imposture. Finally he confessed that he was not the son, but a man named Oswald Diffournet. He had learned sufficient details of the life of Gabriel from friends of the brothers, and depended upon his remarkable resemblance to Gabriel to deceive the parents. He had hoped to defraud the family after his acceptance as their son.

FARM RELIEF RESOLUTIONS

HOUSE MEMBERS IN FAVOR OF NORBECK-NELSON BILL.

Congress Urged to Permit Farmers of North Platte Valley to Retain Titles and Keep on at Industry.

Two farm relief resolutions were given unanimous approval by the house Tuesday morning. One sanctions the Norbeck-Nelson bill now before congress and the other seeks relief for the water users of the North Nlatte project. In many instances, the resolution sets forth, farmers are unable to meet the charges assessed by the government. Such charges when delinquent, becomes a direct lien on the property. Congress is urged to clear up these delinquent operations, to permit farmers to retain title to their lands and continue farming. Representative Barbour of Scottsbluff introduced the resolution.

Nebraska members of congress are urged in a resolution introduced by Representatives Colman, North, Baldridge, Miner and Keifer to give the principles of the Norbeck-Nelson bill their hearty support. This bill is intended to offer relief to all classes of farmers by increasing the price of the farm product and enabling him to pay his debts.

The resolution sets forth that the bill has been largely endorsed by farm organizations thruout the country. Introducers of the resolution approve the extension of such credits as will facilitate the financing of the exportation of surplus agricultural commodities thru the wa rinfluence corporation and its successor.

The Strehlow bill, aimed at the ku klux klan, was not reported out to general file by the committee on miscellaneous subjects tho the committee is ready to report with recommendation for passage. Chairman Whitehead stated that the introducer had asked delay in order to look up a bit of data. The report probably will be submitted Wednesday.

The fish and game committee reported two bills out. H. R. 2 proposes to amend the law pertaining to open season on fur bearing animals. The trapping season now opens November 1 and closes February 1. The proposed opening and closing dates are January 1 and April 1.

H. R. 48, reported out by committee, exempts sparrows, crows, bluejays and hawks from protection under the game and fish laws. The judiciary committee reported out H. R. 40 amending the law in regard to bonds in attachment suits.

Moving pictures will be exhibited in the house chamber by Dr. George E. Condra on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. F. P. Jones Declares She Feels 15 Years Younger Since Tanlac Completely Overcame Indigestion.

"Before I began taking Tanlac a half hour at cleaning house would tire me more than a whole day's work does now," is the statement of Mrs. F. P. Jones, 2008 Halstead St., Chicago Heights, Ill.

"I have answered lots of questions lately about what it is that has made me look so healthy and happy and full of energy, and it always gives me pleasure to speak a good word for Tanlac.

"My troubles were indigestion, extreme nervousness, poor appetite and countless headaches. I was so tired and worn-out I often had to sit down and rest while about my household affairs.

"My daughter took Tanlac and praised it so highly that I began taking it, too, and after the first bottle I felt more active than I had in a long time. Three bottles made such a difference in me that my friends stopped me on the streets and said I looked fifteen years younger, and I certainly do feel that way, too."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

THE UNCONSCIOUS SINNER

By Hazel Deyo Batchelor

(Copyright, 1922, by The Public Ledger Compnay.)

Cleo Ridgefield is the type of girl who unconsciously tempts men to make love to her. When she refuses Dick Wheeler, he tries to commit suicide, and is saved by his guardian Carey Phelps. Carey, believing Cleo to be a heartless flirt, succeeds in meeting her and to obtain revenge for the fact that she has apparently trifled with Dick, plans to marry her. His idea is to tell her on their wedding night; that he has nothing but contempt in his heart for her, and his peculiar attitude after the ceremony and during the evening, arouses vague fears in Cleo's heart. When he finally flings the truth, at her, she is stunned.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Results.

Carey stood there for a moment with Cleo's limp body in his arms, and then lifting her up her carried her into the next room and laid her on the bed.

For a moment he stood there looking down at her. How beautiful she was in her white satin dress that was hardly whiter than the girlish neck and shoulders.

Her face against the pillow was alarmingly pale, the color had even faded from her lips, but her hair, that wonderfully electric hair of hers, shone like gold. It was almost as if her hair had drawn all the vitality of the girl's body up into its gleaming strands.

With a leap of his heart he recalled the last time Cleo had fainted and he had held her in his arms looking down at her. How sure he had been of himself then, but that had been before he had held her in his arms and kissed her. Now he hardly knew what to think of his feelings.

Then he had thought her fainting merely one of a stock of clever tricks; now he was suddenly afraid. She might look as she did now if she were dead.

The thought forced an exclamation from his lips and he bent down closer to her to see if she were breathing.

The faint rise and fall of her breast stirred a vagrant perfume from the clothes she wore. And with his face so close to hers, Carey could see the tracery of blue veins in her white throat. He could even see the blood pulse beneath the skin. How beautiful she was, and how fragile a thing was a woman. He had never realized it before.

Suddenly he realized that he was standing there without making an effort to bring her to, but even as he straightened, her lashes fluttered, and he breathed a quick hard sigh of relief.

He strode to the light switch and turned off the lights, leaving only one shaded light burning on the small table beside the bed. Then he stepped back out of her range. He did not want to be the first thing her eyes rested on when they opened, for his presence at that moment would only terrify her unnecessarily.

On the bed, Cleo opened her eyes dazedly, and closed them again. For the moment she did not remember what had happened. It was if her brain were too weary to exert itself, and this mental tiredness was as nothing to the physical weariness that seemed to weigh down her body and make her disinclined to move.

With a weary little sigh she turned on her side. Carey caught his breath lest she open her eyes suddenly and see him, but she did not. In a moment her regular breathing bespoke the fact that she had fallen asleep. She would probably rest that way until morning.

Carey waited a few minutes, and then softly covered her up with a light coverlet. A moment later he had extinguished the light and strode quickly into the other room, closing the door behind him.

Here he was faced with the remains of the supper, and with a sudden feeling of distaste he went to the room telephone and summoned the waiter

Ten minutes later in dressing gown and slippers he flung himself down on the couch and closed his eyes, but sleep would not come. A slender figure in a white satin gown flashed tantalizingly before his eyes Her voice kept ringing in his ears and over and over again she spoke the same words:

"I'm going away. I never want to see you again!"

It was strange that at the moment of his triumph, Carey did not give a single thought to Dick Wheeler.

Tomorrow—The Worm Turns.

PRINCE MAKES LOVE MATCH

Duke of York Said to Have Proposed Three Times to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon.

LONDON, Jan 16.—A "love match," all Britain says of the engagement of the duke of York to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of a Scottish earl, which was officially announced yesterday.

It was learned today that the duke proposed three times to the fair Scottish lassie.

First, when they were dancing after Princess Mary's wedding.

Secondly, while out golfing.

A third time, and successfully, a fortnight ago, while horseback riding with Lady Elizabeth.

"I've tried it while dancing and golfing," the duke is reported to have said. "Now I'll try proposing on horseback. I'm always lucky on horseback, if nowhere else."

"Well," replied Lady Elizabeth, "if you intend keeping it up forever, I might as well say 'yes' now."

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16—Sentiment among grain traders is somewhat mixed. Those friendly to the buying side said there is good absorption on the declines. A few of the influential local traders feel bullish on Canadian wheat and American corn, they feel Canadian wheat is worth more than American and will gradually work closer to ours

Messages from abroad were very bearish in tone. With Argentine, India and Canada offering wheat relatively lower than the United States, foreigners assert our markets cannot long remain above a world price basis

Apparently there is no falling off in the demand for cash corn from outside markets. The southwest has been a buyer in river markets for several days

Contract stocks of wheat in Chicago public elevators in Chicago Saturday night were 612,000 bushels, an increase of 459,000 bushels for the week. Corn 3,713,000 bushels, increased 62,000, oats 982,0000, increased 15,000.—Lamson

Grain Market Opinions.

Lamson Bros & Co.: The cash demand lacks snap at the moment

Bartlett-Frazier & Co We remain friendly to the buying side on the dips

E. Lowitz & Co, Profitable sales are possible on rallies.

Stein Alstrin A broader speculative interest appears imperative if prices not to suffer some further reaction.

Hulburd Warren & Chandler: We look for a decline in all grains.

Harris Winthrop & Co.: Bearish statistics are offset by an uncertain world's political situation

Thomson McKinnon The trend of prices looks downward.

Logan & Bryan: Two-sided markets are in prospect.

J E. Bennett & Co.: We believe in sales of wheat on bulges and purchases corn on the dips.

Riordan & Martin: We would confine purchases to declines—Lamson

Stock Market Opinions.

Lamson Bros. & Co.. The attitude of congress and political situation abroad are serious handicaps to a bull market.

Post & Flagg: Some of the most experienced traders can't guess the market.

Block Maloney & Co.. On the dips we would buy but not follow the upward swings.

Harris Winthrop & Co.: We look for uncertainty and irregularity for the present.

Clark Childs & Co.. On an improvement in news professionals may experience trouble in getting back stocks sold.

J S. Bache & Co.. Would accumulate Rock Island common on any weakness.

Logan & Bryan. We advise taking profits on long holdings.—Lamson.

Journal of Commerce Report.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Local sentiment in wheat is bearish but there is no pressure except bulges. At the same time there is quiet, steady absorption on the dips. Outside interest is lacking at the moment. According to a leading exporter here Canadian wheat is being offered for sale at Philadelphia and other easten points at much under re-placement cost in the west. The impression had prevailed here that this wheat had been sold to go to Europe.—Lamson

Wall Street Journal Review

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—So completely is the financial district dominated by price movements on the New York stock exchange that sentiment last week had steered from extreme pessimism over the European outlook at the start to comparative cheerfulness regarding the outcome of the French advance beyond the Rhine.

This change could be almost wholly ascribed to the upswing scored by industrial stocks in the face of the continental news.

Baldwin, Royal Dutch, American Locomotive, Asphalt and other active industrials showed initial losses.

Opening prices included: Studebaker, 113⅞; Crucible 69¾ off ¾; Royal Dutch 52½, off ⅜; Anaconda 59, off ⅛; Pan-American 86¾, off ¼, Chile 28¾, off ⅛; Southern Railway 27⅜, up ⅛; Baldwin 133, off ¼; New Haven 17⅛, off ⅛; Asphalt 45¾ off ⅛; U S. Rubber 59⅝, up ⅛; American Loco 122, off ¼; U S Steel 105⅞, off ⅛, Southern Pacific, 88¾; California Petroleum 77⅞, up ⅛; Pan-American "B" 80, off ⅛.

Industrials started to rally almost immediately after the opening. Baldwin recovered 1½ to 134¾. Studebaker ⅞ to 114⅝ and Steel ½ to 106¼. Gulf States also showed strength, advancing 1¼ to 82.

Relieved pressure on leading industrials in the second hour brought out good support and the decline was checked after Steel and other pivotal stocks again had sold off to their opening lows. California Pete ran up early to 79½ against Monday's low of 75. American Waterworks' 6 per cent preferred featured the specialties with a 2-point gain to 55⅞.

Poincare Analyzed.

On my arrival in France in 1912, Monsieur Poincare was minister for foreign affairs; when the war commenced he was president; these circumstances led to my constant and cordial association with him.

Poincare is not a creative genius, but a great lawyer. He relies upon care in examining facts and precision in analysis as the best guarantees against eror. His patient and prodigious industry, his clear and healthy mind, are useful tools in pursuing this system.

If Briand resembles Blaine, Poincare resembles Root. Like the latter, he is reputed to be cold, but to those who know him, his feelings and his passion for the right easily manifest themselves.

Like all leading French statesmen he is provincial; he does not perhaps comprehend America or understand how much less our politics are personal than are theirs. But Poincare now speaks English; what is most extraordinary he has learned it since the war, and this serves to widen his horizon.

His faultless memory, his long life of study and intense intellectual activity, his wide experience in public affairs, especially in finance, constitute a powerful equipment for meeting present problems.

The thinking public know and express this estimate of him, while the instinct of the less articulate masses, the shrewd peasant class for example, leads them to a similar feeling which they would put thus: "If he cannot pull us out of the present mess, no one can." Poincare is hated only by the communists and anarchists.

In fact, Poincare's thesis has the virtue of that simplicity easily comprehended by the humblest citizen. He holds that Germany wilfully destroyed France's property, was beaten, agreed to repair and restore, and must be forced to execute her agreement. Her taxes are lower than France's, her industries more flourishing, her dividends larger. Her restoration to further prosperity is desirable, but it must not be effected at the expense of France.

If he yields, it will be in the face of irrefutable proofs and not under pressure of interested financial groups, whether in France or in any other country. But the fact that his clear mind is always amenable to reason is shown in his disposition to agree to carrying out the Wiesbaden plan of Rathenau and Loucheur for rebuilding northern France as it has been redrafted by Stinnes. Poincare can be depended on to reach sound conclusions because his conclusions are reached by a mind that is both just and clear—a mind that is illumined by the white light of truth.—Myron T. Herrick in Our World.

PLANS FURTHER CUT IN APPROPRIATIONS

Governor Bryan Said to Be Slashing Expenditures in His Budget to Go Before Legislature.

Governor Bryan is reported to be putting the knife deeper into appropriations. In preparing his budget he is said to have decided to make a further cut in the building program of the board of control. Governor McKelvie cut out all buildings and purchase of lands for the university in his recommendations to the legislature and also all buildings asked for by the state normal board and a little more than half the buildings desired by the board of control at state institutions. The board contends that it is badly in need of buildings at several institutions, particularly at the penitentiary, reformatory for men at Lincoln and at the institution for feebleminded youth at Beatrice. The waiting list at nearly all state institutions, including penal and hospitals for the insane and institute for feebleminded. The railway commission is said to be marked by Governor Bryan for a big reduction in his recommendations for appropriations.

Visiting School.

I seek the school house now and then and visit half a day; it seems to me all grown-up men should spend some time that way. I like to hear the little kids tell stories of the flowers and sing about the katydids and of the April showers. I like to watch their swaying drills and see them trip to tune in imitation of the rills in May or early June. I like to see their eager looks when learning something new or reading from their story books the tales of heroes true. I like to watch them playing tag and good old hide-and-seek, to see them all salute the flag with color in the cheek. Today I made a little speech, the teacher asked me to; you should have heard me urge, beseech and tell them what to do. I told them how a boy should act when he becomes a man and how a girl should be, in fact, as noble as she can. I told them how they ought to love their parents and the flag and be as sweet as saints above when playing corner-tag. I told them how they ought to vote when they become of age, to never try to rock the boat of capital or wage. I told them how George Washington was given to the truth and how his first real spurs were won when he was but a youth. I know that speech was trite and stale; they'd heard it all before; it is an old familiar tale repeated o'er and o'er—but coming from an older head, a head with silver hair, I sort of feel those mouldy words took rootage over there. Who knows but that some kid today said. "That old man is right; I think I'll try to live that way; I think I'll start tonight!"—J. Edw. Tufft in Farm Life.

Minority party leadership in the house will probably remain unchanged as the result of an announcement by Representative John N. Garner of Texas, that he was not seeking leadership of the democratic party.

The French Roll.

During a visit to the British front in 1918 one evening after dinner Georges Clemenceau had occasion to leave headquarters for a few minutes and in the pitch darkness of the night lost his way.

"Halt! Who goes there?" the sentry's cry suddenly was heard. Clemenceau did not have the countersign and the sentry stubbornly refused to let him pass.

"You don't suppose I'm a German," roared the Tiger.

"I don't suppose anything about it," replied Tommy, "I simply don't know." Then, after a moment's thought, the sentry said:

"All right, just pronounce the word squirrel."

Clemenceau's pronounciation passed the muster of the critical sentry and the premier was permitted to proceed.—Los Angeles Times.

A resolution declaring the ku klux klan to be an attempt to overthrow organised government was reported to the house of representatives of the Massachusetts legislature.

MEN AND THINGS

The debate between several esteemed citizens over whether the state has a right to levy an inheritance tax merely proves there is nothing new even in taxation. Turn to Plato's dialogs and read the one between the legislator and the citizens. Said the citizens: "What, may we not dispose of our own to whom we please? Gods, what cruelty that it shall not be lawful for us, according as we have been served and attended in our sickness, in our old age, in our affairs, to give more or less to those we have found most diligent about us, at our own fancy and discretion!"

To which the legislator answered: "I, who make the laws, am of the opinion that you neither are yourselves your own nor is that yours of which you are possessed. Both your goods and you belong to your families, as well those past as those to come; but further your family and goods much more appertain to the public. Lest any flatterer in your old age or your sickness, or any passion of your own should unseasonable prevail with you to make an unjust will, I shall take care to prevent that inconvenience; but, having respect both to the universal interest of the city and that of your particular family, I shall establish laws and make it by good reasons appear that private convenience ought to give place to the common benefit."

E. G. Maggi, who is receiver for a bankrupt mortgage company, would like to have the attention for a moment of those who are such firm advocates of taxation by benefits. His company has a $250 mortgage on a $1,000 lot in east Lincoln. It was good security when the loan was made. Since then the city has laid paving on one side at a cost of $200 and paving in front at a cost of $450 and a sewer back of it at a cost of $200. According to the benefit theory that lot ought now to be worth at least $1,850. The most that Mr. Maggi has been offered is $1,000, the original valuation. Therefore, he has abandoned the lot to the city, since he would have to put up $850 to save his $250 mortgage, and then would have only a $1,000 lot on his hands.

As I browse thru ancient tomes I feel more and more the futility of trying to pass off any idea as new. Many a story has had as its central theme the disinclination of the poor young man to wed the rich young woman he loves. Now thus spake Montaigne four hundred years agone: "Those who dissuade us from rich wives for fear they should be less tractable and kind, are out in their advice to make a man lose a real commodity for so frivolous a conjecture. It costs an unreasonable woman no more to pass over one reason than another; they cherish themselves most when they are most wrong. Injustice allures them, as the honor of their virtuous actions does the good; and the more riches they bring with them, they are so much the more good-natured, as women who are handsome are all the more inclined and proud to be chaste."

When the federal government, meaning the republican administration, cut down the surtaxes on incomes, every democrat in the neighborhood set up the claim that it was an act of favoritism to the rich, and that it was done so that they might not pay such a large part of their incomes to the support of the government. The other day we saw a set of figures, presumptively official and correct, which shows that the government is getting more revenue than it did before the cut. The reason, it is explained, is that because the government reached out after so large a part of their income, many rich persons withdrew their money from productive enterprises and put it into tax exempt securities, and when the surtaxes were cut they took it out of tax exempt securities and put it back into productive enterprises. In both cases the reason was the same, they made money by doing so.

A Buffalo woman who belongs to that type that finds a good time to mean cards, booze and late suppers, was robbed in New York the other week of half a million dollars worth of jewels. A group of luck seekers were held up in a gambling house in Chicago and robbed of thousands in cash. A fashionable road house, which means a tavern where the lid is off and no questions asked of anybody at any time, was raided by bandits the other night and the patrons robbed of $25-000 in cash and jewelry. Banditry is likely to prove more powerful than good sense in restoring the moral balance of the people.

Sam Gompers is planning to make America once more "the home of the sane and the land of the free," and he is going to do it by having the Volstead act amended so that everybody can have all the light wine and beer they want to drink. You remember the old story of the crazy man who was firmly convinced that everybody else was crazy but himself. Well, that can be fitted onto a man who believes it is an evidence of sanity to want to drink that which makes men lose their mental balance. Booze was one of the fetters that bound labor in the past; queer that a labor leader will step outside his job to help secure a return to conditions that kept labor poor and, therefore, under the heel of capital.

I saw somewhere that it has cost the government a quarter of a billion dollars to keep American troops in the Rhineland for the four years or more since there existed any real necessity for their being retained there. I hope that somebody who knows will explain why they were kept there, and what useful functions they performed. There was probably some reason for it, but after looking over all of the possible explanations, I fail to find one.

Out Again, In Again.

"You're discharged for lack of evidence," said the magistrate to the prisoner who had been charged with stealing a diamond stick pin. But the prisoner stood like a statue.

"You're discharged!" repeated the magistrate, raising his voice. Still the man did not move.

"Don't you understand?" bellowed the court. "You're discharged! Get out!"

"B-b-but," remonstrated the late defendant doubtfully, "don't I even have to return the pin?"

From American Legion Weekly.

Accomplished.

"I hear that Mrs. Bink's daughter is going to Paris to study music. I didn't know she was musical."

"Oh, yes, remarkably so; show her any gramophone record and she will immediately tell you the name of the piece on the other side of it."—The Passing Show, London.

An invitation to send Marshal Joffre as the head of a French mission to reorganize the soviet red army and the Russian military service has been addressed to the French government by the soviet government, according to an announcement by Le Matin. It is said the French government's reply will be along the line that it is not exactly disposed for the moment to send the hero of the Marne on a visit to the signatories of the treties of Brest-Litovsk and Rapallo.

In Sweden a farmer can be reprimanded by the governor of a province for abusing "mother earth." Over 1,100 cases of abusing farm land by neglecting to cultivate it properly have been dealt with during the last four years.

JUMBLE OF TREES

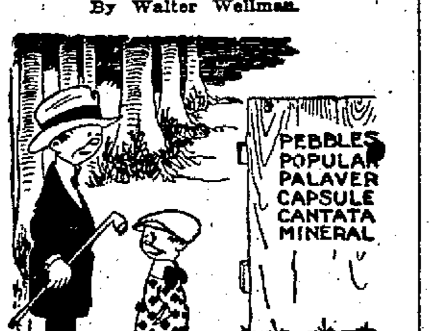
By Walter Wellman.



Tommie and his father are out for a brisk winter walk and dad is teaching Tommie the names of various trees they pass. Take one letter from the first word, one from the second, etc., and spell the name of one tree they see. Repeat the operation, and have the name of another tree. Repeat again, and have the name of a third tree.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle: A SEDAN.

WALT MASON

Masterless Men.

To the Southland where I dwell hoboes come by every train; they are hoofing it, as well, in the sunshine and the rain; they are wretched looking vags as they flaunt their rancid rags and aspire to bootleg jags with a longing that is vain. By the peelers they are hailed with a bleak, disgusted frown; they are rounded up and jailed every time they strike a town; they are chased from burg to grad with a vigor that seems sad; there are jobs that might be had, but they will not hold them down. Rather than get down to work they'll be chivied here and there, pinched wherever they may lurk, and prescribed cheap prison fare; rather than wield saw or ax they'll wear rags upon their backs, walk in shoes all full of cracks, and have chiggers' in their hair. Something's missing in the head of the hobo who goes by, who would rather steal his bread than get down and earn a pie; in his brain there is a flaw, if he'd rather dodge the law than get busy with a saw, making sticks of stovewood fly. Up and down the road they drill, on immoral errands bent, and their ranks grow larger still in these years of discontent; and the only thing we do when the hoboes loom in view is to jail the ragged crew and remark upon their scent.

Evidence.

"But are you sure he's a police dog?" "Positive, my dear; he's always hanging around the kitchen."—Life.
